Council Chambers, Nananee, May 19th, 1913. I met in regular session on evening, Mayor Steacy presiding. Present—Reeve Osborne, Councillors Walters, Carson, Dickinson, and Simpson. Minutes of the last regular session were read, and no motion was confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS

J. Walter Thomson Co., Advertisers, Toronto, enclosing circular, giving method of doing for new industries. Ordered. The A. H. Reid Incinerator Co., bringing to the attention of the Council a new manner of burning garbage by way of burning in an incinerator. Ordered filed for reference. E. R. Checkley, Manager of Merchants Bank, informing that if the loans now run through that Bank for the Sewerage Works and for sewers are by the end of May that the interest will be six per cent. per annum. This does not appear to be a different matter and is the same rate as formerly. By Reeve Osborne, seconded by Councillor Dickinson, that the action be placed in the Finance Committee to make arrangements with Merchants Bank to have carried at five per cent.

Councillor Carson, Chairman of Finance Committee, asked that some action be made with one of the Banks so that the Committee go on with the sewers. By the opinion of the Clerk Neilson Simpson that the Council could not lend any money on new work, as the money at all over is very tight at present time. By Reeve Osborne, seconded by Councillor Carson, that the Finance Committee be authorized to place a gong in Anderson & Son's Livery, and to give the fire whistle in The Furniture Co.'s factory, to be at the next meeting of Council. Carried. Councillor Graham, Chairman of the Sanitary Committee, reported that he had interviewed Mr. Sanitary Inspector, the latter stating to go on with the work to be paid $100.00. Mr. Finkle, the duties of the Sanitary Committee are increasing materially and it is well worth $100.00.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF IT ?

A sudden fit of economy appears to have possessed our County Council who in their desire to save money, are, it is said, contemplating having our criminal class housed in Kingston gaol and dispensing with the use of that portion of our County property. Such a retrograde step would place us in the class of the back-woods settlements and we would forfeit our right to be ranked among the up-to-date Counties of the day. In the January session the same gentlemen raised their wages to five dollars a day and took good care to hold a session in January, another in March and are now calling one for June. Is it not about time that the members of that august body looked to the public interests for a while instead of their own pockets? If an attempt be made to close one of our public institutions which above all others should be in our county town the citizens should arise and get some public spirited men to look after our County affairs. "Citizen."

MARLBANK.

Henry McLaughlin, of Sheffield, died last week. Mr. McLaughlin caught a slight cold some time ago which developed into a case of pneumonia, which was the cause of his death.

In the Millinery Department

The new hats for spring are so different from those of previous seasons that everyone is eager to see them. The display is a brilliant one, for though most of the hats are small, trimmings of vivid color are greatly in evidence. Another point to be noticed is that many of the smartest hats are very lightly trimmed. A tall mount cleverly constructed of feathers, flowers, or ribbons, may be all, but it must be placed "just so," and none but the cleverest and most inspired of milliners can hope to produce the chic and becoming results apparent in these new models.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., "In peace lies the secret of the future prosperity of these two English-speaking nations. In celebration of the past hundred years of peace we should erect here a bridge that will show that there are no insurmountable obstacles in the way of friendly relations between the people of two great nations," said Sir Arthur Lawley of the British Peace Commission at the civic breakfast tendered the peace delegates.

"Such bridge," continued Sir Arthur, "would set a good example to other nations. I am hopeful that England and the United States are in hand; it would be in the cause of humanity. What we want is a monument that will last forever, one that will show to the world that friendly relations do exist and will continue forever. I believe that the erection of a bridge would be a suitable way of commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the signing of the treaty of Ghent."

Sir Arthur Lawley's remarks were to echo the sentiment of the 150 men present, in exception the other delegates, in accord with his views on the subject and there is no doubt that he was appointed by the two Governments to arrange for the celebration of the hundred years of peace with a peace bridge at Niagara Falls.

Dr. L. L. Seamen of the committee, an extensive travel author, set forth the idea of a peace bridge between Canada and the United States to establish a court of arbitration behind it to back up the peace.

"One hundred years of peace is such a great achievement," he said, "we should have perpetual peace. The only way to obtain it is to establish a court of arbitration."

SUFFERINGS TERRIBLE

Adventures of Mawson Party
arctic Are Told.

LONDON, May 20.—Capt. Davis, commander of Mawson's arctic ship, Aurora, arrived here, and in an interview gave details of the sufferings of him and his comrades, and the Lieut. Ninnis and Dr. Xavier the Swiss scientist and sk. Capt. Davis arrived off the expedition in fearful weariness learned by wireless that the party were missing. Davis for news of them with intensity, for he had to go 1,500 miles the coast to pick up Wild party before the sea froze a net set in. In this dilemma he decided after many days to pursue Wild's party first. In spite of terrific gales and blizzards eighty miles an hour this was accomplished.

The ship was sailed back Mawson headquarters after on a 1,500-mile voyage, it was informed that Mawson was alone after the deaths of Ninnis and Mertz. "We were not more than half a mile from Mawson when he returned," said Davis, "but I could not relieve him and his party had gone out with Ninnis, and twenty-five days later little party had started Ninnis into an unfathomable crevice together with a sledge full of provisions. The body was not found for thirty-four days after the trophe Mawson and Mertz were across the plateau on the starvation until on January 10 they succumbed as a result of lack of food. For a further two terrible days Mawson glided on alone with a few dogs as his sole companions. He did not go mad under such conditions was wonderful, and count of his journey, when he will prove one of the greatest of Antarctic heroisms.

HUGE OVATION GIVEN

Premier Borden Addresses a Big Meeting in Toronto.

Prime Minister Says European Affairs
Have Changed In Past Few Months and Crisis Is Worse Than Before
—Meeting In Arena Was Well Organized and Attendance
Numbered About 7,500 People

TORONTO, May 20.—Premier Borden had his turn last night when he addressed one of the best advertised and most thoroughly organized meetings ever held in Toronto. A large parade of nearly three thousand Tory stalwarts with bands and floats escorted the Prime Minister to the Arena, where an awaiting crowd of perhaps seventy-five hundred people had assembled to hear him, and at the conclusion another procession with flaming torchlights and prefervid enthusiasm conducted him to the Ottawa train at North Toronto. No pains were spared to make the meeting a success. That there would be a great crowd was assured.

There were several speakers, but the address of the evening was made by the Prime Minister.

After thanking the assembly for the wonderful reception which they had tendered him, and referring briefly to the recent visit of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Borden dealt with the question of naval power. Canada owed her institutions and liberties to the fact that Britain had been supreme on the seas a century and a half ago.

Reverting to the history of the matter in the Commons, he said that in 1910 he had moved a resolution for Canada to place two battleships or armored cruisers at the disposal of the admiralty, and in November of the same year he had stated that if returned to power information would be gained, and if satisfied of the need they would appeal to Parliament, and if necessary to the people, for immediate and effective aid. He then explained the visit to London and the conference with the British Government, in consequence of which have come the present proposals.

"Within the past twenty-five years the situation has completely altered. Great Britain has been obliged to build not against one great naval power, but against many nations of vast wealth and resources, all intent on the creation of great navies. The task which has thus confronted the motherland has been of exceeding magnitude. This Empire is not a great military power, and its existence depends on naval supremacy. Its very heart is exposed to overwhelming attack when control of the sea is lost, and for this reason more than one-half of those naval forces which once made the British flag predominant throughout the world, have been latterly withdrawn to the immediate vicinity of the British island and concentrated there through sheer necessity."

"The statement of the Admiralty," Mr. Borden continued, "had shown that not alone ships and money, but an action of an Imperial nature would be recognized as the most significant voice and influence in all Imperial matters.

These two ideals before the people were divergent, one pointing to full nationality in the Empire, the other to neutrality and independence. He had no doubt of the outcome.

As to the fate of the naval bill in the Senate, Mr. Borden discredited the assertion made in many Liberal headquarters that the majority in the Canadian Senate was merely an echo of a discredited minority in the House, and that whenever Sir Wilfrid pulled the string the Liberal Senators would dance as he desired.

"Rumor has it that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has already decreed that the bill shall be assassinated in the Senate. Whether this rumor is well-founded I have no knowledge or opinion. Any such result would bring discouragement and dismay to every true friend of the Empire, but comfort and rejoicing to all its enemies. Sir George Ross, the Liberal leader in the Senate, although a strong partisan, is a sound Imperialist. It is not through him that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will direct his operations, although he may be for the formal instrument. A leading Liberal Senator from Quebec is the real exponent and mouthpiece of Laurierism in the Senate, and if the blow comes through him it will fall from no unexpected quarter."

The Prime Minister concluded by deprecating any warlike spirit, but expressed his belief that the maintenance of the prestige of the Empire was the best step towards peace throughout the world.

JOHNSON SIGNS BILL.

Governor of California Ignores Protest of Federal Officers.

SACRAMENTO, May 20.—California's alien land bill became the law of the state yesterday. Against the protests of Japan and the representations of President Wilson and his personal envoy, Secretary of State Bryan, Governor Johnson signed the bill, and ninety days after the adjournment of the Legislature, or on August 10, the act becomes operative.

Meanwhile complications, national and sectional, beset the bill. Over-shadowing all is the outcome of the negotiations now in progress between this country and Japan, which has interpreted the act as discriminatory and offensive.

Within California itself the act has encountered triple hostility, which may delay its activity until Nov. 1, 1914. Democrats opposed state legislation at this time as a matter of party regularity. Nevertheless, so plain to them seems to be the demand for the bill, that after exhausting all parliamentary tactics, the Senate gave but one adverse Democratic vote, and the Assembly but two.

necessity.

"The statement of the Admiralty," Mr. Borden continued, "had shown that not alone ships and money, but an action of an Imperial nature would be recognized as the most significant witness to the resolve of the overseas dominions to take their part in the maintaining of the Empire. They stipulated that aid should include the provision of a certain number of the largest and strongest ships of war of which science and money was capable."

Mr. Borden then, in detail, explained the proposals that out of the consolidated revenue fund $35,000,000 should be immediately applied to increase the Empire's naval forces; the second and third clauses entailed the construction of battleships and their disposal under the Admiralty.

The proposals, he said, were moderate and reasonable, and should have been accepted by the Opposition. In declining, Sir Wilfrid Laurier had made the greatest political mistake of his career.

"While so great a conflict was even being waged in Europe, that no man could measure the gravity of impending developments which even within the past month have imperilled the peace of the world, he thought it consistent with his duty to prattle of bygone debates, to move indefinite and impracticable amendments and to commit his party to the same policy of indefinite delay and procrastination and evasion with which he had met every effort to bring about any real co-operation by Canada in the general naval defence of the King's dominions.

"What was there in the proposal to provoke obstruction for : onths? Assuredly allegiance with inestimable rights and privileges had also obligations and duties. Before the ships can be put into commission a general election will be held and the people will then decide what should be done with the ships permanently."

Mr. Borden then replied to some of the objections which had been raised.

"They are to be built in Great Britain," he said, "simply because we have not the facilities in Canada. To create such facilities would entail an expenditure of from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 and the delay could not be estimated.

"I hesitate to occupy your time even for a moment in referring to the reiterated and absurd assertions of private pledges to the Nationalists on this question. There have been no pledges other than those publicly given. There is not a single Nationalist principle or doctrine which was not proclaimed and adopted by the Quebec Liberals between 1891 and 1896.

Laurier's conception was of a naval service distinct to that of Great Britain and neutral in time of war, unless after extended deliberation. This all led to the severance of existing ties. Such a position of neutrality within the Empire was grotesque and illogical even to the point of amazement and it only meant one thing—
the severance of every tie binding
the Dominion and Empire.

"If we are not prepared to undertake our duty and perform our part in the reasonable responsibilities of the Empire, we have no right to remain within it, and our destiny is within the Empire; let there be no question about it."

He showed that the policy sought unity in time of war and a reasonable party regularity. Nevertheless, so plain to them seems to be the demand for the bill, that after exhausting all parliamentary tactics, the Senate gave but one adverse Democratic vote, and the Assembly but two.

Theodore Bell, late Democratic candidate for governor, opposes the bill.
He grounds his opposition on two contentions—one, that the bill is insufficiently drastic because it permits leases running three years; and, secondly, because at the present it em-barrasses the national administration.

Japanese Press Protests.

TOKIO, May 20.—A section of the press bitterly denounces Governor Johnson's reply to President Wilson as illiberal and unjust, declaring that it is strongly anti-Japanese and that Governor Johnson is seeking to evade his own responsibility under cover of the national law.

It is pointed out that the Japanese have not acquired land by violence, and it is urged that they are no more objectionable than Europeans who acquire citizenship, amass wealth and return to their fatherland.

Express Rate Reduction.

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 20.—It is announced that W. S. Stout of the Dominion Express Co. has made arrangements so that the proposed date of the inauguration of the express rate reduction will not have to be brought to the attention of the Railway Commissioners.

Under the new arrangement it is understood the new rates will come into effect June 10 instead of July 5
as at first proposed.

Wool Kings Charged.

BOSTON, May 20.—The Common-

SYMPATHY.

The dictionary's full of words
That ring with hope and cheer.
They're printed there in flocks and herds
And droves in type that's clear
For any sympathetic chap
To dig right in and borrow
And pour 'em in the ear and lap
Of neighbors who're in sorrow,
And yet when grief has journeyed on
And all the words are spoken
One little deed in kindness done
Beats every other token.

If you are sorry for a man
And want that man to know it
Then help him in what way you can
And let your service show it.
'Tis well enough to sigh with him,
But let your sympathizing
Be something when his hours are grim
That's really worth the prizing.
Stretch forth a hand that he can take
And lean on for the minute,
And, if he needs, for friendship's sake
Let there be something in it.

The pretty phrases you may speak,
The words that you may utter,
Are valueless unto the weak
Who yearn for bread and butter.
This feeling sorry for a man
And saying so is hollow
Unless in every way you can
You let your kind deeds follow.
Stretch out your hand and show to him
Your sympathy is living
And not a lot of phrases grim,
For sympathy is giving.

He Did Not Doubt.

The Rev. Herbert L. Trenchman, in a lecture on "Woman" at a Methodist this winter's type of hobble skirt.

"It's worse than last winter's," he declared. "It's altogether immodest.
I wish all husbands had the courage of a Duluth man I heard about recently.

"This honest fellow's wife turned complacently from the mirror, and, smoothing her new hobble skirt—a skirt of that ultra sort which must be put on with a shoe horn—said:

"I wonder if the hobble skirt will ever go out?"

"Not with me," the man answered firmly."—St. Paul Dispatch.

OUR OTTAWA LETTER

Amidst scenes of excitement and injustice unprecedented in the Canadian Parliament the Borden-Rogers combination on Saturday morning forced the Naval Tribute Bill through Committee stage by the help of the gag enforced in a most unfair and unconstitutional manner by a partisan Chairman and Speaker. So flagrantly unjust was the whole proceeding that finally the Opposition refused to take part in the proceedings at all, and eventually the Bill was reported by a vote of 95-0. Not only was the Bill jammed through in this scandalous manner but it was passed by a Government representing a popular minority of over 200,000 on this question, and which was 16 members short of an absolute majority of the House. There are 221 members of Parliament, so that it would require 111 votes to give an absolute majority, while the Government had but 95 votes. Seven of the Nationalists dodged the issue, and watched the proceedings from the galleries.

AN EXCITING SCENE.

The final two hours of the session after the gag closed off all discussion at 2 o'clock Saturday morning were

LAURIER REJECTED TRICK.

Mr. Borden seemed to see that he had committed his party to a course whose flagrant injustice would be condemned throughout the country, and he offered as a "matter of courtesy" to allow Mr. Carroll to put his amendment. This trick was contemptuously rejected by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who declared that the Opposition wanted no such "courtesy" but simply demanded their rights.

Mr. Carvell angrily interjected—"It looks as if we were living in Russia. We not only have the gag applied to us, but we have had a private member directing the Chairman as to what he should do. We have had enough of this farce during the past three months."

The Government members tried to howl Mr. Carvell down, but he was heard above the uproar—"I am making a few pertinent remarks, Mr. Chairman, something that should be said to you, and I am the man who has got the sand to say it."

This brought the matter to a climax. Amidst extraordinary confusion Hon. Dr. Beland took the point of order that under the rules the Chairman before reporting a Bill must allow opportunity for amendment.

CHAIRMAN IGNORES ALL RULES.

While the ex-Postmaster General

The who's proceeding showed how absolutely right Sir Wilfrid Laurier was when he declared that the Government intended to rule by brute force; it was by brute force in defiance of the rules that they got the Naval Bill through the Committee, with the aid of a subservient Chairman and a compliant Speaker.

EDDYSTONE LIGHTHOUSE.

Tragic History of a Famous Old World Beacon.

The romance of lighthouse construction undoubtedly centers around Eddystone. As long ago as 1696 Winstanley commenced building. Two years later the weak beams of light from the tall candles first pierced the darkness. The engineer had an unshakable belief in his tower and often expressed a wish to be in it during a severe gale.

This chance came on Nov. 26, 1705, when on a storm appearing imminent he set out from Plymouth. The hurricane was one of the most terrible recorded in history, and among other damage it swept away every vestige of the lighthouse, those in it, of course, being lost. Within three years another was built, known as Rudyard's, and, like Winstanley's, of wood.

The obvious occurred after an existence of forty-seven years, it being utterly destroyed by conflagration. The next—Smeaton's—was of stone and lasted until 1881, a period of 120 years, when it was found that it was being undermined and a new structure, the present and fourth, was erected on an adjacent rock. Smeaton's tower was rebuilt on Plymouth Hoe, where can be seen the original candle chandelier and the gongs operated by clockwork to keep awake the drowsy keepers, so that they should snuff the candles at proper intervals.

In medieval times the usual illuminant was a coal or wood fire in an open grate, which gave a fairly good light on a breezy night. For beacons on rocks at sea candles were used. In 1729 oil was first employed, and in 1790 the Argand circular wick lamp with silvered reflectors was introduced. Gas was first experimented with in 1817.

The lights not only warn the mariner of the proximity of the shore, but also give him a clue as to where he is. This is chiefly done by dimming or "shuttering" of the light for a few seconds. Thus should a seaman observe a light which consists of a long, followed by two short flashes, a glance at the chart would give him his position.—London Globe.

ORIGIN OF THE LIFEBOAT.

A Broken Wooden Bowl Gave William Wouldhave the Idea.

Writers are always fond of dilating upon the commonplace origin of remarkable inventions. Still another instance of their accidental nature—and a most interesting one—is given by Noel T. Methley in "The Lifeboat and Its Story."

In the course of a country stroll William Wouldhave, the inventor of the self righting lifeboat, came across a woman who asked his help in lifting a heavy vessel of water just drawn from the well. On the surface of the water there floated the broken half of a wooden bowl. Wouldhave was

AN EXCITING SCENE.

The final two hours of the session after the gag closed off all discussion at 2 o'clock Saturday morning were full of excitement. With the smoothness of a steam roller clause after clause was voted, amendment after amendment designed to protect the interests of the people was crushed out by votes of 96-63.

It was after the final clause was passed that the tempest suddenly broke with a fury that amazed the Government. As soon as the vote was announced Mr. Carroll of South Cape Breton arose to move a new clause, which he had been prevented from moving by an unfair decision of the Nationalist Chairman, Mr. Blondin, earlier in the day. Instantly Premier Borden jumped up and tried to move that the whole Bill be reported; this with the obvious intention of shutting out Mr. Carroll's amendment. It was a repetition of the scene when Sir Wilfrid was so insulted and gagged on the introduction of the closure rules.

ARTHUR MEIGHEN, CHIEF GAG-MASTER.

Instantly the House was in an uproar; both Mr. Carroll and Mr. Borden remained standing, but Chairman Blondin had already "recognized" Mr. Carroll and eventually the Premier sat down. But Mr. Carroll had scarcely started when Mr. Arthur Meighen, the reputed deviser of the gag rules, interfered, claiming that the Premier should have the floor and had been recognized by the Chairman.

This effort to intimidate Chairman Blondin into revoking his course so as to choke off Mr. Carroll was greeted with unbounded indignation from the Opposition.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier analyzed the new rules and showed that Mr. Carroll was within his rights since the closure provided that the clauses of the Bill should be the "first" business, but did not provide that it was the only business that could be brought up. Moreover Mr. Borden when shutting off Mr. Carroll previously had said he could bring in his new clause later. "You have the majority to prevent us doing this," said Sir Wilfrid, "but you have not the right."

CHAIRMAN IS SUBSERVIENT.

After much confusion Chairman Blondin tried to rule that Mr. Borden had the floor, but this provoked such uproar that he quailed and was compelled to allow the argument to proceed. For an hour the manner in which the closure could be applied was debated, Hon. Dr. Pugsley declaring that the manner in which the Government was trying to enforce these rules was "degrading and dishonouring Parliament."

Mr. Boivin Shefford, to the evident discomfort of the Government, pointed out a flaw in the new Rules which gave Mr. Carroll the right to move his amendment.

Finally, after Mr. Meighen had persisted that Mr. Borden was entitled to the floor, Chairman Blondin took the hint and said he had first seen Mr. Borden. This subservient volte face was greeted with derisive jeers from the Opposition, and amidst the uproar Messrs German and E. M. Macdonald were heard demanding why the Chairman had not so ruled when Mr. Carroll first got up. Mr. Macdonald took the point of order that it was too late, an hour after the incident, for the Chairman to altar his ruling and give the Prime Minister the floor.

Mr. Meighen, the aspirant for Hon. Dr. Roche's portfolio, once more assumed the role of chief gag-master and argued that Mr. Borden had moved that the Bill be reported, and that this precluded Mr. Carroll's amendment.

Dr. Beland took the point of order that under the rules the Chairman before reporting a Bill must allow opportunity for amendment.

CHAIRMAN IGNORES ALL RULES.

While the ex-Postmaster General was discussing this point Chairman Blondin seemed to lose his head completely. White with excitement he jumped up and tried to put the question with Hon. Dr. Beland still on his feet. This intensified the uproar, and Hon. Dr. Pugsley, to secure attention, moved that the Chairman should now leave the chair.

Amidst the most furious discord Chairman Blondin was heard repeatedly shouting to put Mr. Borden's motion while Dr. Pugsley was still trying to address the Chair. The Opposition saw that the Government intended to force the Bill through, in direct violation of the rules, and they at once determined not to be tricked into voting under such duress.

LIBERALS REFUSED TO VOTE.

At Chairman Blondin's call the 95 Government members rose amidst cries of shame from the Opposition, but every man behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused point blank to have anything to do with it, and declined to vote.

So great was the general uproar that when Speaker Sproule took the chair nothing could be heard until finally he shouted above the din that Chairman Blondin had reported the Bill, passed by the Committee.

This was greeted with cries of "false report." Repeatedly the Speaker tried to force the Opposition into silent submission, cheered on by the Government, and finally he called upon the members to aid him in maintaining the prerogatives of Parliament in an orderly manner.

Hon. Mr. Oliver moved into the gang-way and retorted "The prerogatives of this House have been usurped by the Government."

Hon. Dr. Pugsley—"The Chairman made a false report to you, Sir. There was another motion before the Chair when he left it. He ignored that motion."

Speaker Sproule angrily declared that such reflections upon the Chairman were contrary to the rules, but Hon. Messrs Oliver and Graham retorted that the rules had been openly broken by the Government and violated by Chairman Blondin.

The tension in the House was growing to a dangerous point, the uproar on both sides being such that any sort of business was impossible. Premier Borden got up and the Speaker said he had moved the adjournment.

BROKE UP IN CONFUSION.

This was combated by the Opposition, determined to fight for at least fair treatment under unfair rules, but this was again refused. Speaker Sproule at the top of his voice put the motion, the Government members rose, the Opposition members stayed in their places, and the House broke up in absolute confusion, Speaker Sproule declaring the motion to adjourn carried and immediately shouldered his way through the crowding members to escape from the scene.

William Wouldhave, the inventor of the self righting lifeboat, came across a woman who asked his help in lifting a heavy vessel of water just drawn from the well. On the surface of the water there floated the broken half of a wooden bowl. Wouldhave was drawn into conversation, and, like many another who cannot keep his hands quiet while he talks, he idly toyed with the floating piece of wood. Naturally he turned it over and found to his surprise that it immediately righted itself. He inverted it again with the same result, and since he was at the time actually at work on the problem of an unsinkable boat he immediately realized the importance of his chance discovery.

It is an experiment that any one can readily make for himself. All you require is the fourth part of a hollow "prolate spheroid," or, to put it in more homely language, the quarter of a coconut shell split from end to end. Put the shell in a bowl of water and you will find that it will not remain capsized, but will return at once to an even keel. In scientific language it will float with only the convex surface downward.

'Any child knows that if you cut up a broken rubber ball you get five or six nice little round bottomed, high ended boats. It remained for William Wouldhave to discover that these are all little self righting lifeboats.

Ontario's Library.

Ontario's new legislative library, now occupied and all but complete, is the only one in the world built on the new central stack plan.

Under the old system, whereby the bookstacks were placed around the outside, with reading rooms inside, the books were exposed to the glare of the sunlight, to damage by the bursting of steam pipes and water-pipes, and to dust leaking through the windows, while the stacks obstructed the light, leaving the reading rooms in semi-darkness. In the Legislative Library these conditions do not exist; the reading and administrative rooms are airy and bright, the bookstacks form one compact central block, and the shelves are even better lighted by electricity than by sunlight, as in older buildings.

The unit principle of construction was adhered to in the installation of the stacks. In other libraries having steel stacks, the whole of the stacks, story upon story, are built in and riveted together, so that, once installed, alteration is impossible. Here, each stack is a separate erection, so that if it ever should become necessary to remove the library the task will be a comparatively easy one.

An Official Blunder.

The Government of Canada issued an Order-in-Council not long ago prescribing that any immigrant "arriving between the 1st of March and the 30th of October, both inclusive, shall, on his arrival in Canada, have in his possession at least $25 in money," etc., etc., and followed this up with a second clause, stating that "between the 1st of November and the last day of February, inclusive, the sum shall be $50."

But what about October 31st? It will be seen that the Canadian officials had entirely forgotten about that day, and it was not till somebody in England pointed out to them this curious omission that the order was withdrawn, and new clauses substituted which made matters right for October 31st also.

Satan, Thwarted, Tries Again.
The fallen angels and Satan were then restrained from materialization for a time, during which they have been confined in Tartarus—earth's

Satan realized that, to alienate

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 19.—At the Montreal
Stock Yards, West End Market, receipts of live stock for the week ending May 17 were 1200 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 3300 hogs and 2200 calves. The offerings today were 800 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 350 calves.
The tone of the market was strong, altho prices for good to choice stock were no higher than a week ago. Choice butchers' cattle sold as high as $7.75, medium from $5.75 to $6.75, and canners from $4.25 to $6.50.
The market for small meats was firm,
with prices little changed from last week. Sheep sold from $7.25 to $7.50, lambs, from $5.50 to $7.25 and culls brought $6.75 to $7. Calves were steady at from $2 to $10, according to size and quality, while hogs were firm at from $10.65 to $10.75 per cwt., fed and watered.
Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.75;
medium, $5.75 to $6.75; common, $5 to $5.25; canners, $4.25 to $4.75; choice cows,
$5.25 to $6.75; medium, $4.25 to $5.25; common, $3.25 to $4.25.

Mrs. H. VON RODEN
of LYNDON, KY.

Recommends Lydia E. Pink-

for Backache, Nervousness, Headaches.

Lyndon, Ky. — "I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
for headaches, neuralgia pains, backache, nervousness and a general run down condition of the system, and am entirely relieved of these troubles. I recommend your remedies to my friends and give you permission to publish what I write."
—Mrs. H. VON RODEN, Lyndon, Ky.

When a woman like Mrs. Von Roden is generous enough to write such a let-tar as the above for publication, she should at least be given credit for a sincere desire to help other suffering women,
for we assure you there is no other reason why she should court such publicity.

THE SCHOOL GARDEN.

Ontario Is Making Big Strides In Educating Children.

The problem of teaching agriculture in the public schools of Ontario, is just about as old as the public schools themselves. Sixty-five years ago, we are told, when the first Normal School for the training of teachers was established, arrangements were made for a regular course of lectures on agricultural chemistry. Following the chronology of this subject down the years we find a series of text-books, regulations and amendments to regulations, but very little in the way of practical agricultural teaching as a result.

Finally came the School Garden
idea; instead of dealing with agriculture as a book subject—in which case too often the relationship of the subject to the outside world may largely be forgotten and the energies of the student focussed upon the memorization of facts and formulae—instead of dealing with mere abstract facts, the boy comes into contact with living things. Not the least—indeed is it not the greatest?—point about this ly told his audience that they had all been believing Satan's lie. He really told spirit mediums that they were mediums, not between dead and living humans, but between humans and demons—the angels. Yet the Pastor said so kindly that none could pose offence. the whole world is witness. Notwith- standing the fact that man's five senses tell him that the dead are dead, the masses believe that the dead are more alive than before they died. Notwithstanding the consist- ency of God's Word, "Thou shalt surely die," the whole world is en- slaved by Satan's lie, "Ye shall not surely die."

Spiritism, Obsession, Possession.
While acknowledging that some mediums are frauds, the Pastor be- lieves the majority of them are sin- cere, but deceived. Many of them thoroughly believe that they com- municate with the dead. Only the Bible can save them from that delu- sion. It alone shows that a demon host is co-operating with Satan, to uphold his lie.

All should accept the Scriptural testimony that the dead are dead, that Jesus' death is the Redemption- price, and that the resurrection is the Biblical salvation. The truth on these subjects will keep us free from Satan's snares, daily growing more subtle.

The General—Hah! So you're to be my partner today?

New Member of Badminton Club—Pleased, I'm sure. May I ask you why you carry three rackets?

The General—Well, you see, I'm rather shortsighted and generally break one or two on my partner during the game.

Life and Death.

The treasurer of the bank was dead. Word had just been received over the telephone. It was shortly after busi- ness hours, and, as if by common con- sent, all of the employees gathered to- gether in a little group.

"I feel as though I had lost a broth- er," said the assistant treasurer.

"I shall never get over it," added the cashier.

"It makes me sick," whispered the paying teller.

"I shall think about it all night," re- marked the bookkeeper.

"It's awful—awful!" said the clerks. There was a moment's silence. Then the errand boy spoke:

"I wonder who'll get the job?" he chirped.

Everybody gave an involuntary start. The errand boy had been a mind read- er.—Puck.

LIVERPOOL LIVE STOCK.

LIVERPOOL, May 19.—John Rogers & Co. cable that there is no change to re- port in the Birkenhead market today, and Saturday's quotations remain unaltered at 15c to 16¼c per pound for Irish steers.

Woodbine Opens Saturday.

TORONTO, May 20.—Woodbine Park will open its gates for the spring meeting next Saturday and from all accounts a busy week of racing is assured. The principal race on open- ing day will be the King's Plate, which is for province-bred, and it is expected that a field of fourteen horses will go to the post. The race looks like an open event, some three or four stables figuring on having a chance. Harry Giddins with Hearts of Oak will be the favorite, but Sea- gram, Davies, Hendrie all seem to be in the money.

B. C. Buys London Site.

LONDON, May 20.—The old Conti- nental Hotel at Lower Regent and Charles streets, one of London's best known landmarks and famous for many years as a rendezvous for sup- per parties, has been sold to British Columbia, and will be torn down, with three adjoining buildings, to make way for a big office building, to be the London headquarters of the Canadian province.

Constipation—

is an enemy within the camp. It will undermine the strongest constitution and ruin the most vigorous health. It leads to indigestion, biliousness, impure blood, bad complexion, sick headaches, and is one of the most frequent cause of appendicitis. To neglect it is slow suicide. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills positively cure Constipation. They are entirely vegetable in composition and do not sicken, weaken or gripe. Preserve your health by taking be forgotten and the energies of the student focussed upon the memoriza- tion of facts and formulae—instead of dealing with mere abstract facts, the boy comes into contact with living things. Not the least—indeed is it not the greatest?—point about this school gardening is the experimental plot which is in charge of the in- dividual pupil, and in which he en- deavors to grow the best grain or the largest vegetables or the most beau- tiful flowers. In too many phases of school life it is so difficult to culti- vate the individuality of the child. Here, however, is work which will de- velop the personal observation and personal resources of the little ex- perimentalist.

In 1907 the Ontario Government made provision for special grants to schools carrying on school gardening, but although the province has 5,000 rural schools only 15 of these qualified for the school garden grant by 1910. An idea always needs a man at the back of it to bend his energies to its development. Therefore, it was well for the propagation of this idea that the Government saw fit to appoint a Director of Elementary Education in the person of Prof. S. B. McCready.

Under the oversight of the active and enthusiastic Director, the work was systematized and rapidly extend- ed. The experimental side of School Garden work has been strengthened by co-operation with the Experimental Union, an organization formed in 1879 and composed of students, ex- students and teachers of the Agricul- tural College. This association con- ducts annually numerous and varied experiments dealing with farm crops, fertilizers, poultry, fruits, vegetables and forestry. In the Schools' Divi- sion of this union, schools are sup- plied with flower and vegetable seeds; the seeds of farm crops, tree seeds, vines, bulbs, shrubs and tree seed- lings as well as instruction sheets, booklets on gardening, Government publications, and instruction sheets are furnished free; charges are made for the other material.

The seeds and other material sup- plied for planting may be used in the school garden plots, or the chil- dren may conduct experiments in gardens of their own at their homes. In any case, there is, as pointed out already, the personal interest and in- dividual responsibility of the pupil.

One on Sir William.

In Canadian legal circles they are telling a little story of how Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., the well-known coun- sel, "put one over," so to speak, on Sir William Meredith, the Ontario Chief Justice.

The jest is relished all the more be- cause Sir William and Mr. Hellmuth are mutual fathers-in-law—the law- yer's daughter having wedded the son of the knight.

It was during a rather tedious argu- ment on a case which Sir William was hearing. Mr. Hellmuth was one of the counsel in the case, and he was proceeding to elaborate his argument on a certain point of law which he thought had an important bearing on the issue.

But the Chief Justice thought other- wise. He was impatient. For a while he listened to the lawyer's argument, then he leaned back with an air of boredom, and interrupted with: "Mr. Hellmuth, it seems to me that this is not relevant. What reason is there why I should be compelled to listen to all this?"

Mr. Hellmuth's mouth had just a suspicion of a smile around its cor- ners as he answered:

"Reasons, my lord—why, $8,000 per year."

WALL STREET BANKS.

As a Rule They Make Loans on a 20 Per Cent Margin.

Most Wall street banks insist on having a twenty point margin behind each loan. That means that a man borrowing $100,000 must put up as security stocks or bonds of $120,000 market value. If the securities decline to a point where the $20,000 margin is reduced to $15,000 the borrower is called upon to put up additional securities. Most brokerage houses do not wait for such a summons, but send the necessary collateral to the bank as soon as they see that the price of their securities has declined.

But the banks are guided always by the character and the financial standing of each borrower. Each bank has a list of favorite borrowers who can secure whatever money they need in times of stress or in times of calm. The loan clerks know who the favorites are and show them every courtesy. It means a good deal for a Stock Exchange house to get on the "favorite list" of a Wall street bank.

Some borrowers, in order to stand well with a bank, never complain when the bank raises the rate on their loans. They go on the theory that it is foolish to dispute a rate with a bank when the difference between 2 per cent and 2½ means only $1.39 a day on the interest charge for a $100,000 loan.—New York Post

CONTINENTAL SCRIP.

What a Two Dollar Bill of the Year 1774 Looked Like.

One of the few pieces of continental scrip now in existence is owned by a former teacher at Shortridge high school. It was given to her at Christmas time in 1808 by a fellow teacher.

The piece measures about 5½ by 2½ inches and is framed to show both sides. Within an intricate leaf and branch border design, on the front side, is printed:

"This indented bill of $2 shall entitle the bearer thereof to receive bills of exchange, payable in London, or gold and silver, at the rate of 4s. 6d. sterling per dollar for the said bill, according to the directions of an act of assembly of Maryland. Dated in Annapolis, this 10th day of April anno Domini, 1774. William Eddis H. Lap ham."

In an upper corner of the reverse side is a picture, about an inch and a half square, representing the British crown, at each side of which is a tiny picture of a man. One of the men is represented as holding a spade, while from the hand of the other dangles a

THE NAPANEE DISTRICT MEETING

The annual meeting of the Metho- dist Church, Napanee District, was held in Grace Church, on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 20 and 21st. Follow- ing are the officers of the District:

Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A.—Chairman.
Rev. Geo. Nickle—Financial Secre- tary.

Rev. J. W. Down—Sunday School Secretary.

Rev. J. W. Down—Secretary of Temperance and Moral Reform.

C. W. DeMille, B.A.—Journal Secre- tary.

E. W. Rowland—Statistical Secre- tary.

Ministerial session was held on Tue- sday, beginning at 2 p.m., and proved to be one of more than ordinary interest. In addition to the regular routine of business two probationers for the ministry, Mr. L. M. Sharpe, Roblin, and Mr. J. F. Everson, Bath, passed creditably the oral examina- tion and proved themselves capable of teaching the fundamental truths of the Scriptures, as also worthy the confidence of the church, and of a year's promotion on probation. Mr. Sharpe holds a certificate of standing in the course of study for the first year showing an average of 67½% and one for the 2nd year showing 78 5-7%, while Mr. Everson's certificat for first year gives him 67%. Both young men have done excellent work on their circuits. There was a helpful and in- spiring discussion on the doctrinal points on which the probationers were examined, which showed the necessity of a vital relation to God, through faith in and consecration to Jesus Christ, in order to the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, the culture of the soul, the making of a strong character and doing worthy service for the church.

On account of failing health Rev. W. D. P. Wilson, of Wilton, has been unable to keep up the work as he felt it should be done, and so asked for superannuation for one year. The re- quest was recommended to the proper authorities.

Rev's W. V. Sexsmith and Martin J. Bates were recommended to be permanently superannuated. These men have served the church long and faithfully and are abundantly worthy of a little rest in declining days.

On Tuesday evening, in Trinity Church, Rev. S. T. Tucker, B.A., B. D., of Odessa, gave an excellent ad- dress on the "Social teaching of Jesus," based on the parable of the the Judge- ment, Matt. 25: 31-46. The Church is coming to see what a large place our efforts, to better the social condition of our fellows, will have in determin- ing our futures for higher service in the new kingdom.

General session began on Wednes- day, at 9 a.m. and closed at 3.30 p.m. The various reports show that the district is in a healthy condition, $5000.00 has been raised for missions, an increase of $258.00 over last year. Notwithstanding many removals there has been a creditable increase in church membership. A number of churches have been repaired and parsonages refurbished, and one new church built at Empey Hill, at a cost of $1200.00. All the connexional funds are well sustained. In view of the high cost of living, and the many financial claims upon the minister, it was regretted that some circuits had not raised the minimum salary. A resolution was accordingly passed ap- pointing the Chairman of the District, the pastors, and recording stewards of Newburgh, Wilton, Morven, Odessa,

Pioneer Farmers' Railway

This title was earned because the Canadian Northern Railway never lacked courage to build its steel into new districts, placing the railway and all that it stands for, within easy reach of the pioneer.

From now on to the end of October Homeseekers' Excursion tickets to Western Canada are on sale every Tuesday. These tickets are good to return with two months from date of issue, except tickets sold from May to July, inclusive, may be extended for two months on payment of Five Dollars for each month or part thereof to agent at destination. Stop-over will be permitted at any Canadian Northern station west of Port Arthur. For the accommodation of passengers, a Tourist Car for Winnipeg via Chicago and Duluth, will leave Toronto Union Station at 11 p. m. on the following dates:—June 3rd, July 1st, July 29th, August 26th, September 23rd and October 21st. THE NAVY AND THE EMPIRE

PRIZE ESSAY WRITTEN BY MISS ADELINE BARKER

Before we can correctly deal with the subject as to what the navy means to the British Empire, we must first consider her geographical position. We have Great Britain, the heart of the Empire, placed in the North Sea. She herself has only 121,000 square miles of an empire which owns 11,900,000 square miles, one quarter of the territory of the wide world. Britain is diffused over the whole earth and the different parts of the Empire are thousands of miles distant not only from each other but also from her.

What does this mean? Watch at Britain's ports for a single year—yes even for a single month, and you will see. Everything that is consumed beyond a certain amount and everything that is necessary for her great manufacturing industries is shipped from somewhere in distant parts. Then, after traversing the long line of ocean waterways, it finds its way into Britain's harbors to feed her industries, employ her people, and also to help to make something for distribution again into the wide world.

If, for a brief space of time, the cotton trade between India and Great Britain were cut off, what would happen? Lancashire would go bankrupt. If, for a single season, the wool which comes into Britain from abroad were kept out what would be the result? If for two months the food supply that comes over the sea to feed Britain's forty-five million people were interrupted what would happen? Who shall say that the result would not be disastrous.

Let us also consider what goes out of Britain. There is the material that has been made, products that are necessary for the sustenance of people of every quarter of the world. But this is not all. There is the civilization of Great Britain, elevating and making better those who need to be elevated. There is the government policies, the law and justice of Great Britain, the moral, the social, and the religious influences of Great Britain—in fact everything that tends to uplift the far distant regions of the world under her protection, is carried far and wide on these lines of communication.

But what protects the waterways? What makes all this possible? The answer is this. The British Empire has a navy which is invincible as compared with any other. That navy is life itself to the British Empire. If that navy were destroyed and the waterways of the Empire cut off, that moment intercourse would cease, the arteries would relax, the veins would grow limp, the heart would beat weaker and weaker and at last—stop.

Naval supremacy is of two kinds, general and local. General naval supremacy consists in the power to defeat in battle and drive from the seas the strongest hostile navy or combination of hostile navies wherever they may be found. Local supremacy consists in the power to send forces in good time to, or to constantly maintain in some distant place of action, forces sufficient to defeat the enemy or hold him in check until the main decision has been obtained in the decisive place of action. It is the general naval supremacy of Great Britain that is the great safe guard of good time, to or to constantly maintain in some distant place of action, forces sufficient to defeat the enemy or hold him in check until the main decision has been obtained in the decisive place of action. It is the general naval supremacy of Great Britain that is the great safe guard of the security and interests of the great Dominions of the Crown. It is this that for all these years has been the restraint upon any designs prejudicial to or inconsiderate of their policy and safety.

The British Empire is not a great military power and she has based her security in the past as in the present, almost entirely upon the strength of her navy. With the enormous increase of naval power that has been undertaken by all great nations of the world, and especially Germany, in recent years, an almost impossible burden has been cast on the British Empire which, for nearly a thousand years, has exercised so profound an influence upon the world's history. Twelve years ago the British navy and the British flag were predominant in every ocean of the world and along the shores of every continent. To-day they are predominant no where except in the North Sea. The foremost duty of insuring safety in home waters has caused Great Britain to draw nearly all the effective naval forces to a common centre in close proximity to the British Islands. In 1902 there were one hundred and sixty war ships on foreign and colonial stations, while to-day there are only seventy-six. Do not imagine that this is due to any reduction of expenditure for the case is really the reverse. The naval expenditure has increased nearly fifty per cent. during the past ten years. The British fleet is powerful, invincible, if you will, and it is necessary that it should remain superior to the united fleets of continental powers, if Britain is to continue to carry her victorious flag from one end of the earth to the other and to cause liberty, peace and happiness to reign everywhere there are British subjects.

Britain is not an aggressive nation for two reasons. Firstly, because her hostages are such that she dare not be aggressive, and secondly, because her possessions are such that she has no wish nor will to be aggressive. Her great problem is to organize, develop, and maintain what she has got. She is a defensive, peaceful nation and not aggressive. But we know that war has come many times within the past fifty years without warning, like a thunderbolt from a clear sky, causing the influence and destiny of more than one nation to be greatly effected. A naval war especially may come with the most startling suddenness for these terrible engines of war are always ready for battle. The security, indeed the very existence, of this empire depends on its sea power. A crushing defeat upon high seas would render the British Islands and any of her colonies subject to the invasion of any great military force. This would be disastrous to the British Empire, for, as I said before, she has no great military power. Britain would gain no advantage in defeating any other power except in so far as the result would insure the safety of the Empire. On the other hand the ambitions which other powers might indulge in if the British navy were once destroyed or disabled, are practically unlimited.

Germany has been very active in the reorganization of her fleet and I have heard several persons say that the time is not far distant when there a great naval war between and Germany. I myself do not think the German fleet is built with the object of attacking in any more than Britain's is the object of attacking. Germany knows she could not match our enormous fleet. Our fleet is two to one of Germany's heavier guns. The calibre is simply overwhelming. Russia, and France are allies of Britain and there is nothing to them so long as "Britannia waves."

Something that stands between and war to-day is the British and her navy. The British navy prevented war when Germany led France to dismiss one of its ministers, M. Delcasse. Again the navy prevented war when Germany sent the "Panther" to France and France took alarm. To-day the German-Austrian Alliance most certainly challenge the Balkan War and demand a barrier be permitted across the projected Austrian advance to the sea. If it were not that the navy is supreme on the sea, many dare not risk it. Cancel the French army or the British navy will come. So long as, they can prevent the victory combination which may see war, they will keep peace.

I heard a person say that the British maintains such an navy is simply a waste of constant drain on the purses of the people. He also stated that the king of England poorer every day at man made a great mistake. To-day the young man does not willingly work on the sea, but he would in the world, in many cases, "go down" if allowed to hang around a town. He would possibly be lazy and indolent and, in time, anything but a credit to his country. The money expended on these great ships of war is home and the English work-ship by it. In fact most of the money is helped by it and the money sent to the country but circulates to the benefit of the many. The navy is never more wealthy than at the present time; her ships are overflowing. What she has the hearts, the brains, and the hands of her subjects all over the twentieth century of Christ-ianity which boasts of its progress, the growing tendency of the world to arm themselves against each other is not only regrettable but alarming. Let us hope that some time soon when the world is in a state of anarchy, a tribunal established by the people of the world, and so constituted that its decrees will be un-derstandable and respect and obedience. The world is the extreme arbiters of the people of Great Britain to whose care that vast empire has been committed must get that they are the trustees of the world. The mainspring of the world is the navy. Let that navy fall short or be destroyed and the world is lost.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

PROUDFOOT DEMONSTRATION.

No merely local interest is involved in the big demonstration to Wm. Proudfoot, K.C., M.P.P., which is being tendered to him by his fellow townsmen at Goderich on May 30th. The whole Province is showing an interest in the event, and a large number of visitors are planning to go from various points. Stratford and the towns along the line between that City and Goderich will be well represented, and Toronto will send a delegation. All the members of the Legislature who are in the Province at the time will be there, and the leader of the Opposition, N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., will be one of the speakers.

Mr. Proudfoot's constituents are making use of this meeting, which will be held in the large skating rink building, to express their appreciation of the public services rendered by their representative in the Whitney-Hanna charges, and to register their protest against the methods employed by the Government in the so-called "Investigation."

WOMEN'S LIBERAL ASSOCIATION

To those who give the subject any attention at all, it will be evident that one of the significant features of this year is the activity among the Liberals of Ontario in forming clubs and organizations. The establishment in March of the Liberal Club Federation, which now embraces nearly 40 clubs, in all parts of the Province, with an efficient and well conducted organization, was an historical event. Another happening that marks a new epoch is the inauguration of the Women's Liberal Association in Toronto, with a charter membership of over 300. It has been in existence for only a few weeks, but already the officers, which include Mrs. N. W. Rowell and some of the best known women in Toronto, are receiving inquiries from various points in the Province from ladies who express a wish to have a Women's Liberal Association in their local centre, and who ask for complete information. It appears certain that the early autumn will see the establishment of a number of other Women's Clubs and the movement will inevitably spread rapidly.

IMPENDING BYE-ELECTIONS.

Mr. Lucas's appointment to the post of Provincial Treasurer will necessitate a bye-election in his constituency, Centre Grey. The date of nomination has been fixed for June 2nd, election on the 9th. As is usual in such circumstances, he will probably not be opposed for re-election.

A contest, however, is pending in North Grey, where Hon. A. G. McKay, now residing in Edmonton, has resigned. The date of this bye-election has not been fixed. A war of attrition is expected when it does come.

If rumor is correct and Hon. J. J. Foy goes to the Senate, it will mean the opening up of one of the North Toronto seats, and possibly another besides. This will mean a strenuous summer in politics.

NEW PROVINCIAL TREASURER.

Hon. I. B. Lucas, who has been appointed Provincial Treasurer, is one of the promising men in the Whitney Government. Even its most ardent friends can scarcely claim that the Whitney Cabinet is a body of strong men. Taken as a whole, it is woefully weak. The addition of Mr. Lucas will help, although it will by no means save a Government which had passed its zenith and which is evidently doomed to defeat. The events of the last

A LITTLE BIT OF PARADISE.

Tahiti, in the South Seas, a Place of Charm and Leisure.

Rarotonga gives you a kind of fore-taste of the whole charm and beauty of the south seas. It is the appetizer, the hors d'oeuvre, not the whole meal. Tahiti is the whole thing, the real thing, the thing one has dreamed about all one's life, the thing which made Stevenson leave Europe forever. All tellers of fairy tales and all poets from Homer downward have always imagined the existence of certain islands which were so full of magic and charm that they turned man from his duty and from all tasks, labor or occupation in which he was engaged and held him a willing captive who would not sell his captivity for all the prizes of the busy world.

Stevenson in one of his books, "The Wrecker," I think, says that if a man who is toiling in some English town were to be suddenly transported to one of the south sea islands, in the neighborhood of Tahiti, and had a vision of the beauty that is there and then were to be transported back again to his prosaic and ugly surroundings he would say, "At any rate I have had my dream." That is how one feels when one has seen Tahiti. One feels one has had one's dream.

The bay of Papeete curves inward. As you sail into it you are sure to see several white schooners at anchor. At one side is a range of light blue volcanic hills stretching out into the crystalline sea, reminding one of Naples, Capri and Sorrento, and in the middle of the bay there is a tiny little island, consisting of a few coco palm trees. The sea is a transparent azure. Little white houses are dotted all along the line of the beach, nestling in greenery. We walked along the beach into the little town and into the suburbs. It was spring in Tahiti, and every kind of imaginable blossom was flaunting its reckless and extravagant beauty. Everything grows wild in Tahiti.

The people seemed extraordinarily contented and invincibly indolent. I was walking along the main street, and I wanted to get to the postoffice, which I knew was somewhere along that street. I stopped at a store and asked whether I was going the right way. The storekeeper, who was a Frenchman, said, "Yes, you are going right." I then asked if it was far. The storekeeper said it was very far indeed. It would take me a good quarter of an hour or twenty minutes friends claim that the Whitney Cabinet is a body of strong men. Taken as a whole, it is woefully weak. The addition of Mr. Lucas will help, although it will by no means save a Government which had passed its zenith and which is evidently doomed to defeat. The events of the last session, the failure to pass needed legislation like Workman's Compensation, and a really adequate Factory Act, the alienating of another million acres in Northern Ontario, the general inertia shown by the Government and especially the damaging revelations in the Hanna Whitney charges, all are sign posts on the road to political eclipse for the Whitney Government. MR. ROWELL AT OWEN SOUND.

"Our Imperial Relations," was the subject of a speech given before the Canadian Club of Owen Sound last week by N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P. The President of the club is T. Murray, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, and the organization is in a flourishing condition.

Mr. Rowell discussed the various proposals for a common body to represent the Empire, for example, Imperial Federation, Imperial Council of Defence, Committee of Imperial Defence, and the Imperial Conference. The speaker considered that the last one was best suited to meet the needs of the situation. It was already in existence and in its makeup was the most responsible body, and the one which, while caring for the general interests of the Empire, would not interfere with the local freedom of the Dominions. The Imperial Conference is made up of the Premiers of Great Britain and the self governing nations. Mr. Rowell greatly preferred this organization to the Committee of Imperial Defence.

FALL OF THE INCAS.

Fate of the Great Race That Has Left Only Traces Behind.

What became of the people who built the Cuzco ruins? Were they the ancestors of "those stolid and down-trodden Indians whom one sees today peddling their rude wares in the market place of Cuzco?" Mr. Bryce discusses the question in his "South America." He says:

"The sudden fall of a whole race is an event so rare in history that one seeks for explanations. It may be that not only the royal Inca family, but nearly the whole ruling class, was destroyed in war, leaving only the peasants, who had already been serfs under their native sovereigns. But one is disposed to believe that the tremendous catastrophe which befell them in the destruction at once of their dynasty, their empire and their religion by fierce conquerors, incomparably superior in energy and knowledge, completely broke not only the spirit of the nation, but the self respect of the individuals who composed it.

"They were already a docile and submissive people, and now under a new tyranny, far harsher than that of rulers of their own blood, they sank into hopeless apathy and ceased to remember what their forefathers had been. The intensity of their devotion to their sovereign and their delity made them helpless when both were overthrown, leaving them nothing to turn to, nothing to strive for.

"The conquistadores were wise in their hateful way when they put forth the resources of cruelty to outrage the feelings of the people and stamp terror in their hearts."

asked whether I was going the right way. The storekeeper, who was a Frenchman, said, "Yes, you are going right." I then asked if it was far. The storekeeper said it was very far indeed. It would take me a good quarter of an hour or twenty minutes to walk there. I asked him if I could hire a conveyance, as I was in a hurry. He shook his head and thought it unlikely. I then went on my way. I thought I would just time myself and see how long it did take to reach the postoffice. I walked fast, but I found, to my amazement, that it took me exactly three minutes to get there. Doubtless it would have taken a native of Tahiti twenty minutes. There is no such thing as hurry and no such thing as energy in these islands.—Maurice Baring in Metropolitan.

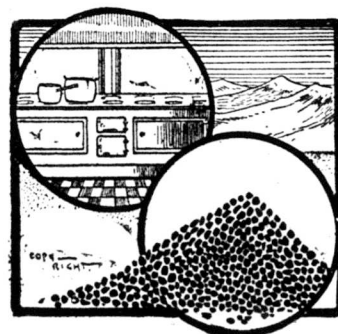

The Rhine May Get the Danube.

Of late the evolutions of the course of the Danube above Vienna have been the subject of much research. According to most authorities, the source of the Danube is in the two streamlets called Bregach and Breg, which descend from the flanks of the Black forest, in the grand duchy of Baden, and unite at Donaueschingen with a spring, regarded by some as the true source. The stream from this point flows southeastward toward the bases of the Rhine and the Lake of Constance through the calcareous beds of the Swabian Jura and at certain points into sinks and rifts. Coloring matter has shown that there is a leakage of this subterranean water to the Rhine basin. The prediction of a German scientist is that the whole of the Danube above Tuttlingen will some day be captured by the Rhine.—New York Sun.

First Sunday Papers.

How Sunday newspapers were circulated in London before the abolition of the "taxes on knowledge" was described by the late R. M. Morrell, the founder of the National Sunday league. Barberians used to take in copies and let them out a penny an hour, and Mr. Morrell recalled the details of the system. It was necessary to call at the barber's on Saturday evening and state the hour for which you wanted the paper. On Sunday the customer fetched it, left sixpence on deposit and came back with the paper at the end of his hour, receiving fivepence change upon its return.—London Chronicle.

- PROLOGUE. -

This fascinating romance of society life, politics and the underworld, this problem of the ninety-eight pearls, this tragedy of the missing state treasurer and a beautiful daughter's search for him, holds the reader's interest from the very first chapter to the last and gives the author a high place among the creators of mystery fiction.

CHAPTER I.

Sentiment and Clews.

IN my criminal work anything that wears skirts is a lady until the law proves her otherwise. From the frayed and slovenly petticoats of the woman who owns a poultry stand in the market and who has grown wealthy by selling chickens at twelve ounces to the pound or the silk sweep of Mamie Tracy, whose diamonds have been stolen down on the avenue or the staidly respectable black and middle aged skirt of the client whose husband has found an affinity partial to laces and fripperies and has run off with her—all the wearers are ladies and as such announced by Hawes. In fact, he carries it to excess. He speaks of his wash lady, with a husband who is an ash merchant, and he announced one day in some excitement that the lady who had just gone out had appropriated all the loose change out of the pocket of his overcoat.

So when Hawes announced a lady I took my feet off my desk, put down the brief I had been reading and rose perfunctorily. With my first glance at my visitor, however, I threw away my cigar and, I have heard since, settled my tie. That this client was different was borne in on me at once by the way she entered the room. She had poise in spite of embarrassment, and her face when she raised her veil was white, refined and young.

"I did not send in my name," she said when she saw me glancing down for the card Hawes usually puts on my table. "It was advice I wanted, and I—I did not think the name would matter."

She was more composed, I think, when she found me considerably older than herself. I saw her looking furtively at the graying places over my ears. I am only thirty-five, as far as that goes, but my family, although it keeps its hair, turns gray early—a business asset, but a social handicap.

"Won't you sit down?" I asked, pushing out a chair so that she would face the light while I remained in shadow. Every doctor and every lawyer knows that trick. Only too often the raising of a woman's veil in my office reveals

at the

and there are exigencies in politics"—

"I hate politics!" she broke in suddenly. "When I read of women wanting to—to vote and all that I wonder if they know what it means to have to be polite to dreadful people, people who have even been convicts and all that. Why, our last butler had been a prize-fighter!" She sat upright with her hands on the arms of the chair. "That is another thing, too, Mr. Knox. The day after father went away, Carter, our butler, left. He was not there that evening to serve dinner, but—he came back late that night and got into the house, using his key to the servants' entrance. He slept there, the maids said, but he was gone before the servants were up, and we have not seen him since."

"Your father has not been ill, has he? I mean recently."

"I cannot think of anything except that he had a tooth pulled." She was quick to resent my smile.

"You have not noticed any mental symptoms—any lack of memory?" Her eyes filled.

"He forgot my birthday two weeks ago," she said. "It was the first one he had ever forgotten in nineteen of them."

Nineteen! Nineteen from thirty-five leaves sixteen!

"What I meant was this," I explained. "People sometimes have sudden and unaccountable lapses of memory and at those times they are apt to stray away from home. Has your father been worried lately?"

"He has not been himself at all. He has been irritable even to me and terrible to the servants. Only to Carter—he was never ugly to Carter."

"You have no brothers or sisters?"

sure it was not there when she folded back the bedclothes for the night at 9 o'clock."

"Eleven twenty-two," I repeated. "Twice eleven is twenty-two. But that isn't very enlightening."

"No," she admitted. "I thought it might be a telephone number, and I called up all the eleven twenty-twos in the city. Annie said Carter had come back, and she went to waken him, but, although his door was locked inside, he did not answer. Annie and I switched on all the lights on the lower floor from the top of the stairs. Then we went down together and looked around. Every window and door was locked, but in father's study, on the first floor, two drawers of his desk were standing open. And in the library, the little compartment in my writing table where I keep my house money, had been broken open and the money taken."

"Nothing else was gone?"

"Nothing. The silver on the sideboard in the dining room, plenty of valuable things in the cabinet in the drawing room—nothing was disturbed."

"It might have been Carter," I reflected. "Did he know where you kept your house money?"

"It is possible, but I hardly think so. Besides, if he was going to steal there were so many more valuable things in the house. My mother's jewels as well as my own were in my dressing room, and the door was not locked."

the time a train starts, or in the eleventh and the two letters of the alphabet—k-v." "K-v!" I repeated. "Why be the Latin cave—beware." Hunter smiled cheerfully. "You'd better stick to the Knox," he said from the door, "don't use Latin in the detective business."

Plattsburg was not the new capital, but it will do for the state. The state doesn't matter either, I will say that my home city, Chester. I live with my mother, his wife and two boys, older than I am and he is a brother. On the day home from his wedding trip down with my traps on a train, accordance with a prearrangement, Fred and Edith met me door.

"Here's your latchkey, Jan," said as he shook hands. "I stipulation—remember we are in the vicinity and home before the neighbors have our reputations to think of."

"There is no hour for Edith said as she kissed me. I have a bath of your own smoke in the drawing room."

Fred was always a lucky fellow.

I had been there now for I had helped to raise two young ones—bully youngsters, too (one could use boxing gloves was four)—and the finest color of the state. I want other things. The boys liked Edith didn't care for animal.

On the day that Margery came to me about her father, home in a state of mixed dinner was not a quiet meal and I talked politics general. Fred was on one side and I on the other always was an arguer.

"What about Fleming?" I asked when Fred had declared these days of corruption in what the government was he didn't think. "Hasn't he been into reform?"

"Bad egg," he said, jabbing to as if it had been a political there's no way to improve except to hold your nose. The public is doing—holding it.

"Hasn't he a daughter?" casually.

"Yes—a lovely girl, too," I said. "It is his only redemption."

"Fleming is a rascal, daughter," Fred persisted. "He and his gang got poor B into trouble and then left him to himself as the only way out. I thought there was something of them—Hansen, Schwartz, rest. I saw Fleming on the day."

"What?" I exclaimed, almost out of my chair.

Fred surveyed me quizzically. "Hasn't he a daughter?"

"Yes, I saw him, Jack, day in an unromantic four and he was swearing at a policeman."

"Where was it?"

"Chestnut and Union. He been struck by a car and badly injured, but the gentleman refused to let him out. No doubt you could get tails from the corner man."

"Look here, Fred," I said

out a chair so that she would not be in the light while I remained in shadow. Every doctor and every lawyer knows that trick. Only too often the raising of a woman's veil in my office reveals the ravages of tears or rouge or dissipation. My new client turned fearlessly to the window an unlined face, with a clear skin, healthily pale. From where I sat her profile was beautiful. "I hardly know how to begin," she said, "but suppose"—slowly—"suppose that a man, a well known man, should leave home without warning, not taking any clothes except those he wore and saying he was coming home to dinner, and he—he?"

"How long has he been gone?"

"Ten days."

"I should think it ought to be looked into," I said decisively and got up. Somehow I couldn't sit quietly. A lawyer who is worth anything is always a partisan, I suppose, and I never hear of a man deserting his wife that I am not indignant, the virtuous scorn of the unmarried man perhaps. "But you will have to tell me more than that. Did this gentleman have any bad habits—that is, did he—er—drink?"

"Not to excess. He played bridge for money, but I believe he was rather lucky."

"Married, I suppose?" I asked casually.

"He had been. His wife died when I"—She stopped and bit her lip. Then it was not her husband, after all. Oddly enough, the sun came out just at that moment, spilling a pool of sunlight at her feet.

"It is my father," she said simply. I was absurdly relieved.

"He would have papers to identify him?"

"His pockets were always full of envelopes and things like that."

"Don't you think I ought to know his name?" I asked. "It need not be known outside of the office, and this is a sort of confessional anyhow, or worse."

"My name is Fleming, Margery Fleming," she said after a second's hesitation, "and my father, Allan Fleming, is the man. Oh, Mr. Knox, what are we going to do? He has been gone for more than a week!"

No wonder she had wished to conceal the identity of the missing man. So Allan Fleming was lost! A good many highly respectable citizens would hope that he might never be found. Fleming, state treasurer, delightful companion, polished gentleman and successful politician of the criminal type. Outside in the corridor the office boy was singing under his breath. "Oh, once there was a miller," he sang, "who lived in a mill." It brought to my mind the reform meeting a year before, where for a few hours we had blown the feeble spark of protest against machine domination to a flame. We had sung a song to that very tune, and with this white faced girl across from me its words came back with revolting truth.

Oh, once there was a capitol
That sat on a hill!
As it's too big to steal away
It's probably there still.
The ring's hand in the treasury
And Fleming with a sack,
They take it out in wagon loads
And never bring it back.

"I am more than sorry," I said. I was too. Whatever he may have been, he was her father. "After all, there may be a dozen simple explanations,

"He has not been himself at all," she has been irritable even to me and terrible to the servants. Only to Carter—he was never ugly to Carter."

"You have no brothers or sisters?"

"None. I came to you"—there she stopped.

"Please tell me how you happened to come to me," I urged.

"I didn't know where to go," she confessed, "so I took the telephone directory, the classified part under 'Attorneys,' and, after I shut my eyes, I put my finger haphazard on the page. It pointed to your name."

I am afraid I flushed at this, but in a moment I laughed.

"We will take it as an omen," I said, "and I will do all that I can. But I am not a detective, Miss Fleming. Don't you think we ought to have one?"

"Not the police!" She shuddered.

"Suppose you tell me what happened the day your father left and how he went away. Tell me the little things, too."

"In the first place," she began, "we live on Monmouth avenue. There are just the two of us and the servants—a cook, two housemaids, a laundress, a butler and a chauffeur. My father spends much of his time at the capital, and in the last two years since my old governess went back to Germany at those times I usually go to mother's sisters at Bellwood, Miss Letitia and Miss Jane Maitland."

I nodded. I knew the Maitland ladies well. I had drawn four different wills for Miss Letitia in the last year.

"My father went away on the 10th of May. He got up from breakfast, picked up his hat and walked out of the house. He was irritated at a letter he had read."

"He took the letter with him. He did not come home that night, and I went to the office the next morning. The stenographer said he had not been there. He is not at Plattsburg because they have been trying to call him from there on the long distance telephone every day."

In spite of her candid face I was sure she was holding something back.

"Why don't you tell me everything?" I asked.

She flushed. Then she opened her pocketbook and gave me a slip of rough paper. On it in careless figures was the number "eleven twenty-two." That was all.

"I was afraid you would think it silly," she said. "It was such a meaningless thing. You see, the second night after father left I was nervous and could not sleep. I expected him home at any time, and I kept listening for his step downstairs. About 3 o'clock I was sure I heard some one in the room below mine. I felt relieved, for I thought he had come back. But I did not hear the door into his bedroom close, and finally I slipped along the hall to his room. I had a queer feeling before I turned on the light that there was some one standing close to me. But the room was empty and the hall too."

"And the paper?"

"The paper had been pinned to a pillow on the bed. When I saw the pin I was startled. I rang for Annie, the second housemaid, who is also a sort of personal maid of mine. It was half past 8 o'clock when Annie came down. I took her into father's room and showed her the paper. She was

"They were not disturbed?"

She hesitated.

"They had been disturbed," she admitted. "My grandmother left each of her children some unstrung pearls. They were a hobby with her. Aunt Jane and Aunt Letitia never had theirs strung, but my mother's were made into different things, all old fashioned. I left them locked in a drawer in my sitting room, where I have always kept them. The following morning the drawer was unlocked and partly open, but nothing was missing."

"All your jewelry was there?"

"All but one ring, which I rarely remove from my finger." I followed her eyes. Under her glove was the outline of a ring, a solitaire stone.

"It does not sound like an ordinary burglary," I reflected. "Nineteen from thirty-five leaves sixteen, according to my mental process, although I know men who could make the difference nothing."

I believe she thought I was a little mad.

"We must find him, Mr. Knox," she insisted as she got up. "If you know of a detective that you can trust please get him. But you can understand that the unexplained absence of the state treasurer must be kept secret. I am sure he is being kept away. You don't know what enemies he has—men like

Mr. Schwartz, who have no scruples, no principle."

"Schwartz?" I repeated in surprise. Henry Schwartz was the boss of his party in the state, the man of whom one of his adversaries had said, with the distinct approval of the voting public, that he was so low in the scale of humanity that it would require a special dispensation of heaven to raise him to the level of total degradation. But he and Fleming were generally supposed to be captain and first mate of the pirate craft that passed with us for the ship of state.

"Mr. Schwartz and my father are allies politically," the girl explained, with heightened color, "but they are not friends. My father is a gentleman."

The inference I allowed to pass unnoticed, and as if she feared she had said too much the girl rose. When she left a few minutes later it was with the promise that she would close the Monmouth avenue house and go to her aunts at Bellwood at once. For myself, I pledged a thorough search for her father and began it by watching the scarlet wing on her hat through the top of the elevator cage until it had descended out of sight.

CHAPTER II.

Uneasy Apprehensions.

I AM afraid it was a queer hodge-podge of clues and sentiment that I poured out to Hunter, the detective, when he came up late that afternoon.

"They're rotten clear through," Hunter reflected. "This administration is worse than the last, and it was a peach. There have been more suicides than I could count on my two hands in the last ten years. I warn you—you'd be better out of this mess."

"What do you think about the eleven twenty-two?" I asked.

"It might be that many dollars or

"Look here, Fred," I said. "Keep that to yourself, will you too, Edith? It's a queer story. I'll tell you some time."

As we left the dining room I her hand on my shoulder.

"Don't get mixed up with that ple, Jack," she advised. "Ma dear girl, but her father p killed Henry Butler, and Hen married my cousin."

"You needn't make it a fair," I protested. "I have the girl once."

But Edith smiled. "I know," she said. "How excited of you to send Bobby that hobby horse!"

"The boy has to learn to ride. In four years he can pony, and I'm going to see that. He'll be eight by that time." Edith laughed.

"In four years!" she said. "four years you'll be forty, Jack. It's a mighty unattractive I gets past forty without being and won by some woman. buying—"

"How dare you run away like that?" she called. "You promised me"—The door closed behind her.

I went over and spoke through the panels.

"Follow her, she flies; fly from her, she follows." Oh, wife and mother! I called.

"For heaven's sake, Edith!" Fred's voice rose irritably. "If you and Jack are going to talk all evening go and sit on his knee and let me alone. The way you two flirt under my nose is a scandal. Do you hear that, Jack?"

"Good night, Edith," I called. "I have left you a kiss on the upper left hand panel of the door. And I want to ask you one more question. What if I fly from the woman and she doesn't follow?"

"Thank your lucky stars," Fred called in a muffled voice.

I had some work to do at the office, and half past 8 that night found me at my desk. But my mind strayed from the papers before me. After a useless effort to concentrate I gave it up as useless, and by 10 o'clock I was on the street again, my evening wasted, the papers in the libel case of the Star against the Eagle untouched and I the victim of an uneasy apprehension that took me, almost without volition, to the neighborhood of the Fleming house, for it had occurred to me that Miss Fleming might not have left the house that day, as she had promised, might still be there, liable to another intrusion by the mysterious individual who had a key to the house.

It was a relief, consequently, when I reached its corner to find no lights in the building. The girl had kept her word. Assured of that, I looked at the house curiously. It was one of the largest in the city, not wide, but running far back along the side street. A small yard with a low iron fence and a garage completed the property. The street lights left the back of the house in shadow, and as I stopped in the shelter of the garage I was positive that I heard some one working with a rear window of the empty house. A moment later the sounds ceased and muffled footsteps came down the cement walk. The intruder made no attempt to open the iron gate, and against the light I saw him put a leg over the low fence, follow it up with the other and start up the street still with peculiar noiselessness of stride. He was a short, heavy shouldered fellow in a cap, and his silhouette showed a prodigious length of arm.

I followed, I don't mind saying, in some excitement. I had a vision of grabbing him from behind and leading him or pushing him, under the circumstances, in triumph to the police station, and another mental picture not so pleasant of being found on the pavement by some passerby with a small punctuation mark ending my sentence of life.

Once the man just ahead stopped and lighted a cigarette, and the odor of a very fair Turkish tobacco came back to me. He glanced back over his shoulder at me and went on without quickening his pace. We met no policemen, and after perhaps five minutes' walking, when the strain was growing tense, my gentleman of the rubber soled shoes swung abruptly to the left and—entered the police station!

I had occasion to see Davidson many and that all the buildings were pharmacies and numbered eleven twenty-two.

After such a night I slept late. Edith had gone out with Fred when I came downstairs. I have a great admiration for Edith, for her tolerance with my uncertain hours, for her cheery breakfast room and the smiling good nature of the servants she engages. I have a theory that, show me a sullen servant and I will show you a sullen mistress, although Edith herself disclaims all responsibility and lays credit for the smile with which Katie brings in my eggs and coffee to largess on my part.

On that particular morning Katie brought me a letter, and I recognized the cramped and rather uncertain writing of Miss Jane Maitland.

Dear Mr. Knox—Sister Letitia wishes me to ask you if you can dine with us tonight informally. She has changed her mind in regard to the Colored Orphans' home and would like to consult you about it. Very truly yours,

SUSAN JANE MAITLAND.

It was a very commonplace note. I had had one like it after every board meeting of the orphans' home, Miss Maitland being on principle an aggressive minority; also, having considerable mind, changing it became almost as ponderous an operation as moving a barn.

I came across Miss Jane's letter the other day when I was gathering the material for this narrative, and I sat for a time with it in my hand thinking over again the chain of events in which it had been the first link, a series of strange happenings that began with my acceptance of the invitation, and that led through ways as dark and tricks as vain as Bret Harte's Heathen Chinee ever dreamed of to the final scene at the White Cat. With the letter I had fled away a half dozen articles, and I ranged them all on the desk in front of me—the letter, the bit of paper with eleven twenty-two on it that Margery gave me the first time I saw her, a notebook filled with jerky characters that looked like Arabic and were newspaper shorthand, a railroad schedule, a bullet, the latter slightly flattened; a cube shaped piece of chalk, which I put back in its box with a shudder and labeled "Poison," and a small gold buckle from a slipper, which I—at which I did not shudder.

I did not need to make the climax of my story. They lay before me.

At 11 o'clock Hunter called up. He said he was going after the affair himself, but that it was hard to stick a dip net into the political puddle without pulling out a lot more than you went after or than it was healthy to get. He wanted to know if I had come across any more K. V's. Whereupon I put away the notes I had made about Della and Mamie Brennan.

CHAPTER III

Ninety-eight Pearls.

I WENT to Bellwood that evening. It was a suburban town a dozen miles from the city. Street cars had so far failed to spoil its tree bordered streets, and it was exclusive to the point of stagnation. The Maitland place was at the head of the main street. Miss Letitia, who was seventy, had had sufficient commercial instinct some years before to cut her ancestral acres—their ancestral acres, though Miss Jane hardly counted—into building lots, except perhaps an acre horsehair sofa in the back parlor. She wore a new lace cap and was twitteringly excited.

"Our niece is here," she explained, as I took off my coat—everything was "ours" with Jane; "mine" with Letitia—and we are having an ice at dinner. Please say that ices are not injurious, Mr. Knox. My sister is so opposed to them, and I had to beg for this."

"On the contrary, the doctors have ordered ices for my young nephews," I said gravely, "and I dote on them myself."

Miss Jane beamed. Indeed, there was something almost unnaturally gay about the little old lady all that evening.

Miss Letitia received me, as usual, in the back parlor. Miss Fleming was there also, sewing by a window, and in her straight white dress, with her hair drawn back and braided around her head, she looked even younger than before. There was no time for conversation. Miss Letitia launched at once into the extravagance of both molasses and butter on the colored orphans' bread.

"You have had no news at all?" Miss Fleming said cautiously, her head bent over her work.

"None," I returned, under cover of the table linen to which Miss Letitia's mind had veered. "I have a good man working on it." As she glanced at me questioningly, "It needed a detective, Miss Fleming." With every movement of the girl I could see the gleaming of a diamond on her engagement finger.

"If I didn't watch her, Jane would ruin them," said Miss Letitia. "She gives 'em apples when they keep their faces clean, and the bills for soap have gone up double. Soap once a day's enough for a colored child. Do you smell anything burning, Knox?"

I sniffed and lied, whereupon Miss Letitia swept her black silk, her colored orphans and her majestic presence out of the room. As the door closed, Miss Fleming put down her sewing.

"I do not dare to tell them, Mr. Knox," she said. "They are old, and they hate him anyhow. I couldn't sleep last night. I have hemmed tea towels for Aunt Letitia today until I am frantic, and all day I have been wondering over something you said yesterday. You said, you remember, that you were not a detective, that some men could take nineteen from thirty-five and leave nothing. What did you mean?"

American Gardens.

Speaking one day at a color conference, in which pictures of the beautiful gardens and statuary at Versailles were shown, Carroll Beckwith, the artist, made a comparison between the methods of French and American landscape architects.

"The French are better gardeners," he said. "They have a lighter touch. The trouble with Americans is that when they make gardens they often call in graveyard sculptors and architects. The result is that our formal gardens sometimes look like cemeteries."—New York Post.

growing tense, my gentleman of the rubber soled shoes swung abruptly to the left and—entered the police station!

I had occasion to see Davidson many times after that during the strange development of the Fleming case. I had the peculiar experience later of having him follow me as I trailed him that night, and I had occasion once to test the strength of his long arms when he helped to thrust me through the transom at the White Cat, but I never met him without a recurrence of the sheepish feeling with which I watched him swagger up to the night sergeant and fall into easy conversation with the man behind the desk.

Two or three roundsmen were sitting against the wall lazily, helmets off and coats open against the warmth of the early spring night. In a back room others were playing checkers and disputing noisily. Davidson's voice came distinctly through the open windows.

"The house is closed," he reported, "but one of the basement windows isn't shuttered, and the lock is bad. I couldn't find Shields. He'd better keep an eye on it." He stopped and fished in his pockets with a grin. "This was tied to the knob of the kitchen door," he said, raising his voice for the benefit of the room and holding aloft a piece of paper. "For Shields," he explained, "and signed 'Della.'"

The men gathered around him. Even the sergeant got up and leaned forward, his elbows on his desk.

"Read it," he said lazily. "Shields has got a wife, and her name ain't Della."

"Dear Tom," Davidson read in a mincing falsetto, "we are closing up unexpected, so I won't be here tonight. I am going to Mamie Brennan's, and if you want to talk to me you can get me by calling up Anderson's drug store. The clerk is a gentleman friend of mine. Mr. Carter, the butler, told me before he left he would get me a place as parlor maid, so I'll have another situation soon. Della."

The sergeant scowled. "I'm goin' to talk to Tom," he said, reaching out for the note. "He's got a nice family, and things like that're bad for the force."

I lighted the cigar, which had been my excuse for loitering on the pavement and went on. It sounded involved for a novice, but if I could find Anderson's drugstore I could find Mamie Brennan. Through Mamie Brennan I would get Della and through Della I might find Carter, and so I made the first note in my new business of man hunter.

It was late when I reached the corner of Chestnut and Union streets, where Fred had said Allan Fleming had come to grief in a cab. But the corner man had gone, and the night man on the beat knew nothing, of course, of any particular collision.

I went home to bed. I had made no headway, I had lost conceit with myself and a day and evening at the office, and I had gained the certainty that Margery Fleming was safe in Bellwood and the uncertain address of a servant who might know something about Mr. Fleming.

I was still awake at 1 o'clock and consulted the telephone directory. There were twelve Andersons in the city who conducted drugstores.

When I finally went to sleep I dreamed that I was driving Margery Fleming along a street in a broken taxicab seventy, had sufficient commercial instinct some years before to cut her ancestral acres—their ancestral acres, though Miss Jane hardly counted—into building lots, except perhaps an acre which surrounded the house. Thus the Matland ladies were reputed to be extremely wealthy. And as they never spent any money, no doubt they were.

I had taken dinner at Bellwood before, and the memory was not hilarious. Miss Letitia was deaf, but chose to ignore the fact. With superb indifference she would break into the conversation with some wholly alien remark that necessitated a reassembling of one's ideas, making the meal a series of mental gymnastics. Miss Jane, through long practice and because she only skimmed the surface of conversation, took her cerebral flights easily, but I am more unwieldy of mind.

Nor was Miss Letitia's dominance wholly conversational. Her sister Jane was her creature, alternately snubbed and bullied. To Miss Letitia, Jane, in spite of her sixty-five years, was still a child, and sometimes a bad one. Miss Letitia gave her expurgated books to read and forbade her to read divorce court proceedings in the newspapers.

HOME COURSE IN SCIENTIFIC AGRICULTURE

FIFTH ARTICLE — HOME VEGETABLE GARDEN.

By W. R. BEATTIE, Assistant Horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture.

BY means of the home garden the production of the vegetable supply for the family is directly under control and in many cases is the only way whereby clean, fresh produce may be secured.

The work of caring for a garden is usually done at spare times, and for this reason alone the location should be near the dwelling. Many persons prefer to plant the garden in a differ-should be resorted to only in very small gardens or where it is desirable to prepare a small area very thoroughly.

After plowing the next important step is to smooth and pulverize the soil. The pulverizing process should extend as deep as the plowing. Some gardeners prefer to cut the land thoroughly with a disk harrow before plowing, so that when it is turned by the plow the bottom soil will be fine and mellow. After the plow the disk or cutting harrow is again brought into play and the pulverizing process completed. If the soil is a trifle too dry and contains lumps it may be necessary to use a roller or clod crusher.

For garden crops there is no fertilizer that will compare with good, well rotted barnyard manure. Chicken, pigeon and sheep manures rank high as fertilizers. The manure from fowls is especially adapted for dropping in the hills or rows of plants. Market gardeners frequently apply 2,500 pounds of high grade fertilizer per acre each year.

Many of the garden seeds lose their vitality after one year's time.

Throughout the northern states it is desirable to start plants of certain crops before the danger of frost has passed. The simplest method of starting a limited number of early plants is by means of a shallow box placed in a south window of the dwelling. After the plants appear the box should be turned each day to prevent the plants drawing toward the light.

The most common method of starting early plants in the north is by means of a hotbed. In the north the hotbed should be started in February or early in March. It is desirable to have a supply of straw or loose manure on hand to throw over the bed in case of extremely cold weather.

During bright days the hotbed will heat very quickly from the sunshine on the glass, and it will be necessary to ventilate during the early morning by slightly raising the sash on the opposite side from the wind. Care should be taken in ventilating to protect the plants from a draft of cold air. Toward evening close the sash.

Hotbeds should be watered on bright days and in the morning only. After watering, the bed should be well ventilated.

In the north the use of the cold frame is for hardening off plants that have been started in the hotbed, preparatory to setting them in the garden. In the south the cold frame is made to take the place of the hotbed in starting early plants.

Good soil for a seed bed, a specially prepared place for starting plants, consists of one part of well rotted manure, two parts of good garden loam or rotted sods and one part of sharp, fine sand. The manure should be thoroughly rotted, but it should not have been exposed to the weather and the strength leached out of it. The addition of leaf mold or peat will tend to make the soil better adapted for seed bed purposes. Mix all the ingredients together in a heap, stirring well with a shovel, after which the soil should be sifted and placed in boxes or in the bed ready for sowing the seed.

protected during the winter. A mulch of manure, straw or leaves forms a good protection, but care should be taken that the mulch does not contain seeds.

Frequent shallow cultivation should be employed for most garden crops, and during dry weather the depth should not exceed two inches. By keeping the surface soil well stirred what is termed a "dust mulch" is formed, and, while this layer of finely divided soil will become quite dry, it prevents the escape of moisture through the pores of the soil. A mulch consisting of fine manure, clippings from the lawn or any similar material, spread to a distance of ten or twelve inches around the plants, will preserve the moisture, but the mulch should not be so heavy as to exclude the air.

A crust forming over the soil after a rain or watering is detrimental to plant growth and should be broken up as soon as the land can be worked. To determine when the soil is sufficiently dry for cultivation apply the usual test of squeezing in the hand. If the soil adheres in a ball it is too wet.

There are a number of one horse cultivators that are especially adapted for work in the garden. The hand tools should include a spade, a spading fork, a cut steel rake, a ten foot measuring pole, a line for laying off rows, a standard hoe, a narrow hoe, dibbles, a trowel, an assortment of hand weeder, a watering can, a wheelbarrow, and if the work is to be done largely by hand the outfit should also include some form of wheel hoe.

In the control of insects and diseases that infest garden crops it is often possible to accomplish a great amount of good by careful sanitary management. In the autumn any refuse that remains should be gathered and placed in the compost heap or burned if diseased or infested with insects. Several of the garden insects find protection during the winter under boards and any loose material that may remain in the garden. Dead vines or leaves of plants are frequently covered with disease spores and should be burned.

Farm Machinery, Its Use and Abuse.

Consider the binder, an expensive machine which is needed but a few days of the year. "There is no manufacturing business that has its machinery standing idle so much of the time as has farming," said Dean Price of the Ohio College of Agriculture. "The average life of farm machinery is ten years. Counting depreciation and interest, it costs each year about 16 per cent of the original investment to keep it on the farm. The way some machinery is cared for it will cost more than this."

ent location every five or six years. A gentle slope toward the south or south-east is most desirable for the production of early crops. It is an advantage to have protection on the north and northwest.

Good natural drainage of the garden area is of prime importance. The land should have sufficient fall to drain off surplus water during heavy rains, but the fall should not be so great that the soil will be washed. The surface of the garden should not contain depressions. Waste water from surrounding land should not flow toward the garden, and the fall below should be such that there will be no danger of flood water backing up. The garden should not be located along the banks of a stream that will be liable to overflow during the growing season.

A good fence around the garden plot is almost indispensable.

Where the work is to be done mainly by means of horse tools the arrangement should be such as to give the longest possible rows, and straight outlines should be followed. For hand cultivation the arrangement can be quite different. Horse cultivation is recommended whenever possible.

The second matter for consideration

ment should be such as to give the longest possible rows, and straight outlines should be followed. For hand cultivation the arrangement can be quite different. Horse cultivation is recommended whenever possible.

The second matter for consideration is the location of permanent crops and small fruits. The area devoted to the hotbed, cold frame and seed bed should be decided upon, but these may be shifted more or less from year to year or located in some convenient place outside of the garden. If a part of the land is low and moist, such crops as celery, onions and late cucumbers should be placed there. If part of the soil is high, warm and dry, that is the proper location for early crops and those that need quick, warm soil. The land may be occupied at all times.

There are very few soils that are not improved by some form of drainage.

Autumn is the time for plowing hard or stiff clay soils, especially if in a part of the country where freezing takes place. Sandy loams and soils that contain a large amount of humus may be plowed in the spring, but the work should be done early in order that the soil may settle before planting. In the southern states this process must be accomplished by means of frequent cultivations. It is desirable to plow the garden early.

Sandy soils will bear plowing much earlier than heavy clay soils. In the garden greater depth of plowing should be practiced than for ordinary farm crops. Subsoiling will be found advantageous in most cases. Hand spading saves the rough bark in the spring destroys many codling moth larvae, and ing of cellar windows and do wormy fruit or fruit pack kept, for the capture and of the emerging moths, is practiced. Weed seeds and the spores of fungous diseases may be killed by placing the soil in pans and baking it for an hour in a hot oven.

No definite rule can be given for the depth to which seeds should be planted. In all cases the depth should be uniform. The seed bed should be neither dry nor too wet.

Plants grown in a house, hotbed or cold frame will require to be hardened off before planting in the garden. Hardening off is usually accomplished by ventilating freely and by reducing the amount of water applied to the plant bed. The plant bed should not become too dry.

Some plants require protection from the direct rays of the sun in summer or from cold in winter, and there are many that need special protection while they are quite small. Seedlings of many of the garden crops are unable to force their way through the crust formed on the soil after heavy rains, and it is necessary either to break the crust with a steel rake or soften it by watering.

For protecting plants from cold in winter several kinds of materials are used, such as boards, cloth, pine boughs, straw, manure or leaves. There are a number of crops of a tropical nature that may be grown far north, provided they are properly protected during the winter.

Several of the annual crops can be matured much earlier in the spring if they are planted in the autumn and

Mulch For Potatoes.

Irish potatoes grown under a mulch produced about 45 per cent more than the same acreage given ordinary culture at the Nebraska station. The mulch was four to five inches of straw of any kind or hay or leaves. Of course no cultivation whatever was given. The mulching of these potatoes cost less than would the cultivation, yet the mulching heavily increased the yield.

ARNOLD AT QUEBEC.

Reminiscence of Ill-Starred American Expedition.

An unique literary manuscript book has just recently come into the possession of the curator and authorities of the Chateau de Ramezay Museum. Mr. Thomas O'Leary, assistant librarian, acquired this most interesting historical item, and later on all Canadians will have an opportunity of perusing the expense book of the commissary under Benedict Arnold when he was in command in Quebec, after the death of Montgomery. The book is a pocket memorandum, measuring three and one-half, by four and one-half inches.

The entries commence on the 8th of February, 1776, and end May 17th, 1776. They go to show that large sums of money were disbursed for the purchase of beef and other supplies, and that, to give the invader his due, he paid his way, to this extent at least, and did not live at the expense of the inhabitants, as it may possibly have been assumed.

This little book is in excellent condition, when it is remembered that it was with difficulty that the American soldiers at Quebec brought even their bodies back. The wonder is that this book should have survived the perils and dangers of that unfortunate expedition. But more wonderful is the fact, that the book should have found its way back to the very locality at Quebec where it had been in 1775 and then to the Chateau de Ramezay, the headquarters of the Continental Army in 1775-76. The following are some of the items in the "Expense Book of John Halsted, commissary under Benedict Arnold, before Quebec, 1776":

Micartie's Acct—Jan. 7-16.—4 loads from Mr. Bondfields; 1 do. to (?); 1 do. from Bondfields; 16, 3 do. from do.; washing woman—Widow Giroud at Renauds. St. Foix, 8th Feb., 1776, received from General Arnold, Three Hundred and Sixty pounds Lawful money or £300 Hx. cury.

The above are a few extracts from the memorandum book which will give the readers an idea of the value of the items from a historical point of view. This John Halsted must have been very punctilious in his accounts, and to antiquarians and others this authentic relic of the past will doubtless be of much interest.

There is a note written at the end of the entries by a W. Paterson, into whose possession the book, no doubt, subsequently came. It reads:

"The foregoing entries would seem to have been made by some person who was connected with the military operations in Canada 1775-76, perhaps in the Commissary department, possibly a John Halsted. There is no mem. to indicate the name."

Cultivation of orchards is the best procedure for curculion. It keeps the orchard many of the desirable places for the adults, and it tionably destroys a high percentage of the insects in the ground. Cultivations through the ground in July and August will crush the eggs and pupae of this insect, present in greatest numbers beneath the surface of the earth. It is possible that it succeeds in destroying some moth larvae.

The thinning of overloads the summer is often an opportunity removing apples bearing the and the destruction of such worms at least may prevent further damage and leave a high percent of perfect fruit upon the trees.

BANANA DESSERTS.

These Recipes Are Delicious and Bound to Be Liked.

Banana Charlotte.—Line the bottom of a plain mould with a layer of lemon jelly and decorate with strips of neatly cut angelica and candied cherries. Trim the required number of lady fingers and line the sides of the mold so that they fit closely. Beat up three eggs in a basin and stir in two cupfuls of boiling milk, sweetened with three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Return this to the saucepan, add one heaping table- spoonful of powdered gelatin which has been dissolved in half a cupful of boiling water, one teaspoonful of van- illa extract and stir over the fire with a wooden spoon until it thickens. Remove from the fire, add the pulp of four ripe bananas and when cool fold in one cupful of whipped cream. Just before the mixture sets pour it into the prepared mold and place it on ice to form. Unmould the shape carefully on a cold dish and serve.

Banana Tartlets.—Soak eight table- spoonfuls of chopped cocoanut in suffi- cient milk to cover, beat up till smooth and the thickness of batter, then add three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, four beaten yolks of eggs, half a cupful of whipped cream, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract and the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Peel twelve ban- anas and rub them through a sieve, then add to the mixture. Line gem- pans with pastry and fill with the mix- ture; bake in a hot oven for ten min- utes. Beat up the whites of two eggs until stiff, then add half a pound of confectioner's sugar and one table- spoonful of cornstarch and mix well to- gether. Put a thin layer over the tart- lets and put them in the oven to dry.

Banana Custard.—Peel six bananas and pass through a sieve; add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, four well beat- en eggs, two cupfuls of milk and one teaspoonful of lemon extract; pour into a buttered fireproof dish and bake till set in a moderate oven. When cold or- nament with cherries cut in halves.

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. I could not digest my food and everything caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation and at times, I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came to only 80 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally, I had the good fortune to try "Fruit-a-tives" and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy, I steadily improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds, and this is more than I ever weighed even before my illness.

Whistling For a Living.

A novel industry has been brought to light by the news that a man who is taking 450 British song birds to British Columbia is an expert bird whistler. It appears that it is no un- common thing for a man who keeps a bird fancier's shop to be able to whistle a distinct series of bird notes. At the beginning of each series, says The Daily Citizen, describing the work of the professional bird-whistler, the different feathered tribes whose cages completely covered the walls took up the lay, piping as if their little hearts would break for joy. When the lin- nets ceased the canaries, hearing the notes of the man-whistler, broke into full-throated song. Then when the ex- pert started to whistle skylark notes the imprisoned songsters of the heav- ens forgot their captivity and gave the sun, peeping shyly in between the closed blinds, a melodious wel- come.

It appears that when a bird is caught and put into a cage it is very apt to sulk and become miserable. This is where the bird-whistler comes in useful. He imitates the tones of whatever kind of bird this one hap- pens to be, and the little prisoner, thinking it has company, forgets all his troubles and breaks into a song of joy.

Sometimes the bird-whistler can teach one bird another bird's song. One man taught a goldfinch to sing like a linnet and a linnet to sing like a goldfinch.

THE HOT WATER BAG.

How to Mend Holes in This Very Use- ful Article.

It is best not to entirely fill a rubber hot water bottle. When partly full rest it on something and press the top down until the water rises in the neck, then screw on the top. This drives out the air and keeps the water hot longer. A hot water bag will last much longer if at first it is well greased inside with olive oil or vaseline.

To mend a rubber bag first inflate with air and then fasten the cork securely. Now take a rubber band, melt it over a flame and apply while plastic to the torn place. A small hole may be covered in this manner. If you have a small piece of thin sheet rubber heat this also and paste over the gum while it is still hot. Adhesive plaster will also mend it neatly. There is also a rivet which is used for mending purposes. It has a flat head on one side, and the stem is threaded to secure a bur on the opposite side.

To mend rubber goods which are not subject to extreme heat melt gum tissue in chloroform. Apply one piece and when that hardens place a second and then a third layer, allowing each to dry thoroughly before applying the other. This makes a thin patch which is durable.

Do not throw the wornout hot water bag away, but cut it in round or oval pieces and use as mats to put under your flowerpots.

In the absence of a hot water bottle or bag a common flannel bag, made in a convenient size, with a drawstring, will serve in ordinary ailments such as toothache, earache and other minor pains. Fill with hot sand or salt. It is safer than a cheap rubber bottle, just as efficacious and much handier to use. Keep a half dozen on hand.

Practical Flower Holder.

A simple and practical flower holder is made of green rubberized silk, the shade of natural leaves, and is out- lined with a green wire. When worn it effectually prevents the penetration of any moisture to the gown. The wire edge permits of shaping the holder to the bouquet proper, and the latter is then attached to the corsage or wher- ever else desired.

To Make Plants Grow.

Plants will grow more quickly if a few drops of ammonia are added once a week. The water should be lukewarm, not colder than the atmosphere, when you water your plants.

Ways to Save.

A cloth dipped in ammonia will often remove the stains from the collar of an overcoat.

Whip cream in a pitcher instead of a bowl to do it in half the time and with- out spattering.

Paraffin rubbed on the heels of stock- ings will cause them to last much longer without wearing out.

To clean plaster ornaments, busts, vases, etc., dip in clear starch mixed with water. When dry brush off.

Stick a pin through the cork of every bottle that contains poison, and this may save tragic mistakes when seek- ing medicines in the dark.

Japanese Wall Paper.

It is said that mikado wall papers with the dainty Japanese treatment will be popular this season, when the new attractions in wall papers have been launched, which is generally in the early spring. The black back- ground papers are very decorative and are rapidly gaining favor here. Follow- ing this come the beautiful tapestry effects in wall paper.

Old hairbrushes which have become soft can be made quite hard and firm by dipping them in a strong solution of alum.

"Cynthia, I'm just plumb wore out havin' them women folks depend on me for everything, and they don't seem to think I'm doin' anythin' extra. I tell you, them women folks o' mine are that dependent they couldn't get a meal's victuals without me to help. But they're soon goin' to find out how dependent they are. Then they'll appreciate me."

"Why, Uncle Al, are you going away?" inquired Cynthia in surprise.

"I'm goin' to become a recluse," announced Pepperdine portentously. "I'm goin' miles into the country and live all alone in a cabin for six months, and Susan and them girls will see who's been doin' the work."

"Eut, Uncle Al," exclaimed Cynthia, "who will do your washing and such like?"

Apparently it traveled south until picked up by the equatorial currents and was borne to the south- ernmost end of the continent, thence around Cape Horn to the point where it was finally picked up.

HOME COURSE IN SCIENTIFIC AGRICULTURE

FIFTH ARTICLE — HOME VEGETABLE GARDEN.

By W. R. BEATTIE, Assistant Horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture.

BY means of the home garden the production of the vegetable supply for the family is directly under control and in many cases is the only way whereby clean, fresh produce may be secured.

The work of caring for a garden is usually done at spare times, and for this reason alone the location should be near the dwelling. Many persons prefer to plant the garden in a differ-should be resorted to only in very small gardens or where it is desirable to prepare a small area very thoroughly.

After plowing the next important step is to smooth and pulverize the soil. The pulverizing process should extend as deep as the plowing. Some gardeners prefer to cut the land thoroughly with a disk harrow before plowing, so that when it is turned by the plow the bottom soil will be fine and mellow. After the plow the disk or cutting harrow is again brought into play and the pulverizing process completed. If the soil is a trifle too dry and contains lumps it may be necessary to use a roller or clod crusher.

For garden crops there is no fertilizer that will compare with good, well rotted barnyard manure. Chicken, pigeon and sheep manures rank high as fertilizers. The manure from fowls is especially adapted for dropping in the hills or rows of plants. Market gardeners frequently apply 2,500 pounds of high grade fertilizer per acre each year.

Many of the garden seeds lose their vitality after one year's time.

Throughout the northern states it is desirable to start plants of certain crops before the danger of frost has passed. The simplest method of starting a limited number of early plants is by means of a shallow box placed in a south window of the dwelling. After the plants appear the box should be turned each day to prevent the plants drawing toward the light.

The most common method of starting early plants in the north is by means of a hotbed. In the north the hotbed should be started in February or early in March. It is desirable to have a supply of straw or loose manure on hand to throw over the bed in case of extremely cold weather.

During bright days the hotbed will heat very quickly from the sunshine on the glass, and it will be necessary to ventilate during the early morning by slightly raising the sash on the opposite side from the wind. Care should be taken in ventilating to protect the plants from a draft of cold air. Toward evening close the sash.

Hotbeds should be watered on bright days and in the morning only. After watering, the bed should be well ventilated.

In the north the use of the cold frame is for hardening off plants that have been started in the hotbed, preparatory to setting them in the garden. In the south the cold frame is made to take the place of the hotbed in starting early plants.

Good soil for a seed bed, a specially prepared place for starting plants, consists of one part of well rotted manure, two parts of good garden loam or rotted sods and one part of sharp, fine sand. The manure should be thoroughly rotted, but it should not have been exposed to the weather and the strength leached out of it. The addition of leaf mold or peat will tend to make the soil better adapted for seed bed purposes. Mix all the ingredients together in a heap, stirring well with a shovel, after which the soil should be sifted and placed in boxes or in the bed ready for sowing the seed.

protected during the winter. A mulch of manure, straw or leaves forms a good protection, but care should be taken that the mulch does not contain seeds.

Frequent shallow cultivation should be employed for most garden crops, and during dry weather the depth should not exceed two inches. By keeping the surface soil well stirred what is termed a "dust mulch" is formed, and, while this layer of finely divided soil will become quite dry, it prevents the escape of moisture through the pores of the soil. A mulch consisting of fine manure, clippings from the lawn or any similar material, spread to a distance of ten or twelve inches around the plants, will preserve the moisture, but the mulch should not be so heavy as to exclude the air.

A crust forming over the soil after a rain or watering is detrimental to plant growth and should be broken up as soon as the land can be worked. To determine when the soil is sufficiently dry for cultivation apply the usual test of squeezing in the hand. If the soil adheres in a ball it is too wet.

There are a number of one horse cultivators that are especially adapted for work in the garden. The hand tools should include a spade, a spading fork, a cut steel rake, a ten foot measuring pole, a line for laying off rows, a standard hoe, a narrow hoe, dibbles, a trowel, an assortment of hand weedeers, a watering can, a wheelbarrow, and if the work is to be done largely by hand the outfit should also include some form of wheel hoe.

In the control of insects and diseases that infest garden crops it is often possible to accomplish a great amount of good by careful sanitary management. In the autumn any refuse that remains should be gathered and placed in the compost heap or burned if diseased or infested with insects. Several of the garden insects find protection during the winter under boards and any loose material that may remain in the garden. Dead vines or leaves of plants are frequently covered with disease spores and should be burned.

Farm Machinery, Its Use and Abuse.

Consider the binder, an expensive machine which is needed but a few days of the year. "There is no manufacturing business that has its machinery standing idle so much of the time as has farming," said Dean Price of the Ohio College of Agriculture. "The average life of farm machinery is ten years. Counting depreciation and interest, it costs each year about 10 per cent of the original investment to keep it on the farm. The way some machinery is cared for it will cost more than this."

Mulch For Potatoes.

Irish potatoes grown under a mulch produced about 45 per cent more than the same acreage given ordinary culture at the Nebraska station. The

ent location every five or six years. A gentle slope toward the south or south-east is most desirable for the production of early crops. It is an advantage to have protection on the north and northwest.

Good natural drainage of the garden area is of prime importance. The land should have sufficient fall to drain off surplus water during heavy rains, but the fall should not be so great that the soil will be washed. The surface of the garden should not contain depressions. Waste water from surrounding land should not flow toward the garden, and the fall below should be such that there will be no danger of flood water backing up. The garden should not be located along the banks of a stream that will be liable to overflow during the growing season.

A good fence around the garden plot is almost indispensable.

Where the work is to be done mainly by means of horse tools the arrangement should be such as to give the longest possible rows, and straight out-lines should be followed. For hand cultivation the arrangement can be quite different. Horse cultivation is recommended whenever possible.

means of horse tools the arrangement should be such as to give the longest possible rows, and straight outlines should be followed. For hand cultivation the arrangement can be quite different. Horse cultivation is recommended whenever possible.

The second matter for consideration is the location of permanent crops and small fruits. The area devoted to the hotbed, cold frame and seed bed should be decided upon, but these may be shifted more or less from year to year or located in some convenient place outside of the garden. If a part of the land is low and moist, such crops as celery, onions and late cucumbers should be placed there. If part of the soil is high, warm and dry, that is the proper location for early crops and those that need quick, warm soil. The land may be occupied at all times.

There are very few soils that are not improved by some form of drainage.

Autumn is the time for plowing hard or stiff clay soils, especially if in a part of the country where freezing takes place. Sandy loams and soils that contain a large amount of humus may be plowed in the spring, but the work should be done early in order that the soil may settle before planting. In the southern states this process must be accomplished by means of frequent cultivations. It is desirable to plow the garden early.

Sandy soils will bear plowing much earlier than heavy clay soils. In the garden greater depth of plowing should be practiced than for ordinary farm crops. Subsoiling will be found advantageous in most cases. Hand spading shovel, after which the soil should be sifted and placed in boxes or in the bed ready for sowing the seed.

Weed seeds and the spores of fungous diseases may be killed by placing the soil in pans and baking it for an hour in a hot oven.

No definite rule can be given for the depth to which seeds should be planted. In all cases the depth should be uniform. The seed bed should be neither dry nor too wet.

Plants grown in a house, hotbed or cold frame will require to be hardened off before planting in the garden. Hardening off is usually accomplished by ventilating freely and by reducing the amount of water applied to the plant bed. The plant bed should not become too dry.

Some plants require protection from the direct rays of the sun in summer or from cold in winter, and there are many that need special protection while they are quite small. Seedlings of many of the garden crops are unable to force their way through the crust formed on the soil after heavy rains, and it is necessary either to break the crust with a steel rake or soften it by watering.

For protecting plants from cold in winter several kinds of materials are used, such as boards, cloth, pine boughs, straw, manure or leaves. There are a number of crops of a tropical nature that may be grown far north, provided they are properly protected during the winter.

Several of the annual crops can be matured much earlier in the spring if they are planted in the autumn and covered, after which the soil should be sifted and placed in boxes or in the bed ready for sowing the seed.

Mulch For Potatoes.

Irish potatoes grown under a mulch produced about 45 per cent more than the same acreage given ordinary culture at the Nebraska station. The mulch was four to five inches of straw of any kind or hay or leaves. Of course no cultivation whatever was given. The mulching of these potatoes cost less than would the cultivation, yet the mulching heavily increased the yield.

ARNOLD AT QUEBEC.

Reminiscence of Ill-Starred American Expedition.

An unique literary manuscript book has just recently come into the possession of the curator and authorities of the Chateau de Ramezay Museum. Mr. Thomas O'Leary, assistant librarian, acquired this most interesting historical item, and later on all Canadians will have an opportunity of perusing the expense book of the commissary under Benedict Arnold when he was in command in Quebec, after the death of Montgomery. The book is a pocket memorandum, measuring three and one-half, by four and one-half inches.

The entries commence on the 8th of February, 1776, and end May 17th, 1776. They go to show that large sums of money were disbursed for the purchase of beef and other supplies, and that, to give the invader his due, he paid his way, to this extent at least, and did not live at the expense of the inhabitants, as it may possibly have been assumed.

This little book is in excellent condition, when it is remembered that it was with difficulty that the American soldiers at Quebec brought even their bodies back. The wonder is that this book should have survived the perils and dangers of that unfortunate expedition. But more wonderful is the fact, that the book should have found its way back to the very locality at Quebec where it had been in 1775 and then to the Chateau de Ramezay, the headquarters of the Continental Army in 1775-76. The following are some of the items in the "Expense Book of John Halsted, commissary under Benedict Arnold, before Quebec, 1776":

Micartie's Acct—Jan. 7-16.—4 loads from Mr. Bondfields; 1 do. to (?); 1 do. from Bondfields; 16, 3 do. from do.; washing woman—Sidow Giroud at Renauds. St. Foix, 8th Feb., 1776, received from General Arnold, Three Hundred and Sixty pounds Lawful money or £300 Hx. cury.

The above are a few extracts from the memorandum book which will give the readers an idea of the value of the items from a historical point of view. This John Halsted must have been very punctilious in his accounts, and to antiquarians and others this authentic relic of the past will doubtless be of much interest.

There is a note written at the end of the entries by a W. Paterson, into whose possession the book, no doubt, subsequently came. It reads:

"The foregoing entries would seem to have been made by some person who was connected with the military operations in Canada 1775-76, perhaps in the Commissary department, possibly a John Halsted. There is no mem. to indicate the name."

Scraping the rough bark from the spring destroys many of the codling moth larvae, and the cleaning of cellar windows and door wormy fruit or fruit pack kept, for the capture and destruction of the emerging moths, is so practiced. The destruction of fruit for the purpose of ridding of codling moth is not an effective measure from the fact that the majority of the worms fruit before it falls to the ground. It was shown by exper-

APPLES DAMAGED BY PLUM CUTWORM.

72 per cent of codling moth larvae leave the apples either before or after they have fallen or within two hours after. On the other hand, destruction of windfall apples by picking up the fruit by pasturing with hogs is advised.

Cultivation of orchards is one of the best procedures for curculionid. It keeps the orchard free of many of the desirable hill places for the adults, and it additionally destroys a high percentage of the insects in the ground. Cultivations through the month of July and August will crush the eggs and pupae of this insect, and prevent in greatest numbers beneath the surface of the earth time. It is possible that it succeeds in destroying some of the moth larvae.

The thinning of overloaded orchards in the summer is often an opportunity for removing apples bearing these worms and the destruction of such apples at least may prevent further damage and leave a higher percentage of perfect fruit upon the trees.

There are many useful natural parasites and other enemies of both curculionid and codling moth. Missouri Bulletin.

BANANA DESSERTS.

These Recipes Are Delicious and Bound to Be Liked.

Banana Charlotte.—Line the bottom of a plain mould with a layer of lemon jelly and decorate with strips of neatly cut angelica and candied cherries. Trim the required number of lady fingers and line the sides of the mold so that they fit closely. Beat up three eggs in a basin and stir in two cupfuls of boiling milk, sweetened with three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Return this to the saucepan, add one heaping tablespoonful of powdered gelatin which has been dissolved in half a cupful of boiling water, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract and stir over the fire with a wooden spoon until it thickens. Remove from the fire, add the pulp of four ripe bananas and when cool fold in one cupful of whipped cream. Just before the mixture sets pour it into the prepared mold and place it on ice to form. Unmould the shape carefully on a cold dish and serve.

Banana Tartlets.—Soak eight tablespoonfuls of chopped cocoanut in sufficient milk to cover, beat up till smooth and the thickness of batter, then add three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, four beaten yolks of eggs, half a cupful of whipped cream, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract and the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Peel twelve bananas and rub them through a sieve, then add to the mixture. Line gem pans with pastry and fill with the mixture; bake in a hot oven for ten minutes. Beat up the whites of two eggs until stiff, then add half a pound of confectioner's sugar and one tablespoonful of cornstarch and mix well together. Put a thin layer over the tartlets and put them in the oven to dry.

Banana Custard.—Peel six bananas and pass through a sieve; add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, four well beaten eggs, two cupfuls of milk and one teaspoonful of lemon extract; pour into a buttered fireproof dish and bake till set in a moderate oven. When cold ornament with cherries cut in halves.

"Fruit-a-tives"

HULL, QUE., DEC. 24th. 1909

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. I could not digest my food and everything caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation and at times, I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came to only 80 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally, I had the good fortune to try "Fruit-a-tives" and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy, I steadily improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds, and this is more than I ever weighed even before my illness.

I attribute my cure solely and entirely to "Fruit-a-tives" and can never praise them too much for saving my life. To all who suffer from Dyspepsia and Constipation, I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" as a miraculous remedy."

Whistling For a Living.

A novel industry has been brought to light by the news that a man who is taking 450 British song birds to British Columbia is an expert bird whistler. It appears that it is no uncommon thing for a man who keeps a bird fancier's shop to be able to whistle a distinct series of bird notes. At the beginning of each series, says The Daily Citizen, describing the work of the professional bird-whistler, the different feathered tribes whose cages completely covered the walls took up the lay, piping as if their little hearts would break for joy. When the linnets ceased the canaries, hearing the notes of the man-whistler, broke into full-throated song. Then when the expert started to whistle skylark notes the imprisoned songsters of the heavens forgot their captivity and gave the sun, peeping shyly in between the closed blinds, a melodious welcome.

It appears that when a bird is caught and put into a cage it is very apt to sulk and become miserable. This is where the bird-whistler comes in useful. He imitates the tones of whatever kind of bird this one happens to be, and the little prisoner, thinking it has company, forgets all his troubles and breaks into a song of joy.

Sometimes the bird-whistler can teach one bird another bird's song. One man taught a goldfinch to sing like a linnet and a linnet to sing like a goldfinch.

THE HOT WATER BAG.

How to Mend Holes In This Very Useful Article.

It is best not to entirely fill a rubber hot water bottle. When partly full rest it on something and press the top down until the water rises in the neck, then screw on the top. This drives out the air and keeps the water hot longer. A hot water bag will last much longer if at first it is well greased inside with olive oil or vaseline.

To mend a rubber bag first inflate with air and then fasten the cork securely. Now take a rubber band, melt it over a flame and apply while plastic to the torn place. A small hole may be covered in this manner. If you have a small piece of thin sheet rubber heat this also and paste over the gum while it is still hot. Adhesive plaster will also mend it neatly. There is also a rivet which is used for mending purposes. It has a flat head on one side, and the stem is threaded to secure a bur on the opposite side.

To mend rubber goods which are not subject to extreme heat melt gum tissue in chloroform. Apply one piece and when that hardens place a second and then a third layer, allowing each to dry thoroughly before applying the other. This makes a thin patch which is durable.

Do not throw the wornout hot water bag away, but cut it in round or oval pieces and use as mats to put under your flowerpots.

In the absence of a hot water bottle or bag a common flannel bag, made in a convenient size, with a drawstring, will serve in ordinary ailments such as toothache, earache and other minor pains. Fill with hot sand or salt. It is safer than a cheap rubber bottle, just as efficacious and much handier to use. Keep a half dozen on hand.

Practical Flower Holder.

A simple and practical flower holder is made of green rubberized silk, the shade of natural leaves, and is outlined with a green wire. When worn it effectually prevents the penetration of any moisture to the gown. The wire edge permits of shaping the holder to the bouquet proper, and the latter is then attached to the corsage or wherever else desired.

To Make Plants Grow.

Plants will grow more quickly if a few drops of ammonia are added once a week. The water should be lukewarm, not colder than the atmosphere, when you water your plants.

Ways to Save.

A cloth dipped in ammonia will often remove the stains from the collar of an overcoat.

Whip cream in a pitcher instead of a bowl to do it in half the time and without spattering.

Paraffin rubbed on the heels of stockings will cause them to last much longer without wearing out.

To clean plaster ornaments, busts, vases, etc., dip in clear starch mixed with water. When dry brush off.

Stick a pin through the cork of every bottle that contains poison, and this may save tragic mistakes when seeking medicines in the dark.

Japanese Wall Paper.

It is said that mikado wall papers with the dainty Japanese treatment will be popular this season, when the new attractions in wall papers have been launched, which is generally in the early spring. The black background papers are very decorative and are rapidly gaining favor here. Following this come the beautiful tapestry effects in wall paper.

Stiffening Old Hairbrushes.

Old hairbrushes which have become soft can be made quite hard and firm by dipping them in a strong solution of alum.

Dependency of Man.

Al Pepperdine had called upon his niece to unbend his marital woes.

One of his chief grievances was that he often had to help around the house—carry water or coal or build fires.

"Cynthia, I'm just plumb wore out havin' them women folks depend on me for everything, and they don't seem to think I'm doin' anythin' extra. I tell you, them women folks o' mine are that dependent they couldn't get a meal's victuals without me to help. But they're soon goin' to find out how dependent they are. Then they'll appreciate me."

"Why, Uncle 'Al, are you going away?" inquired Cynthia in surprise.

"I'm goin' to become a recluse," announced Pepperdine portentously. "I'm goin' miles into the country and live all alone in a cabin for six months, and Susan and them girls will see who's been doin' the work."

"But, Uncle Al," exclaimed Cynthia, "who will do your washing and such like?"

"Why, I'll bring that to Susan on Saturday night when I come in to get my bread."—Judge.

The most amazing part of it, is that it was never reported as being seen. The drifting buoy, could it be recorded, would break all records for derelicts, caught by the currents of the North Atlantic. Apparently it traveled south until picked up by the equatorial currents and was borne to the southernmost end of the continent, thence around Cape Horn to the point where it was finally picked up.

Buys Scottish Estate.

The Sutherlandshire estate of 50,000 acres which the Duke of Sutherland has sold to J. W. Stewart, of Vancouver, embraces some of the finest scenery in the Scottish Highlands. Bounded on the south by Loch Assynt and the River Inver, it includes the villages of Stoer, Achmelvich, Inver, and Kylesku. It includes more than one deer forest, and is a portion of the immense estate of the Lords Reay, which was sold to the first Duke of Sutherland for a million and a half dollars. Mr. Stewart is a native of Drumbeg, Sutherlandshire, and it was a cherished desire of his to possess a portion of his native land, including the district in which he was born.
